LONDON GIVES UP HOPE

SITUATION GROWS WORSE

CLOUDS ON THE HORIZON

Observers of the European political situation see ominous war clouds looming on the horizon, according to the Washington correspondent of Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz.

The conviction is expressed that the situation on the Continent, which has been growing steadily worse in the last few days, is likely to deteriorate over the winter.

There is no telling where the storm is likely to break, but Washington officials point out that the Austrian situation is filled with "imponderables" any one of which may supply the pretext for a war implicating the whole of Europe.

FEVERISH PREPARATIONS.

Every country in Europe, says the Swan, Culbertson correspondent, is now engaged in feverish war preparations.

The new British armament policy, taken in conjunction with the Commons speeches by Mr. Stanley Baldwin and Sir John Simon, are believed to indicate a conviction in London that hopes of maintaining peace in Europe much longer are not good.

CURRENCY FEARS.

Meanwhile, there is imminent danger of a break in the gold bloc, which would almost certainly be followed by the obligatory devaluation of all European gold currencies.

Observers are convinced that if any one of the gold countries abandons the gold basis, the rest would immediately follow suit.

It is also suggested as a distinct possibility that foreign gold holdings in London, estimated at £200,000,000 might be taken over, possibly at the old gold parity.

Sterling exchange is expected to weaken.

JACQUES CARTIER CELEBRATIONS

BRITISH DELEGATES TO CANADA

London, Aug. 1. Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes and Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, Warden of New College, Oxford, will represent the British Government at the forthcoming Jacques Cartier celebrations in Canada.

Jacques Cartier, the French navigator, became famous as the discoverer of the St. Lawrence River.—British Wireless.

PRINCE OFF TO BIARRITZ

TO SPEND GOLFING HOLIDAY

London, Aug. 1. The Prince of Wales landed at Le Bourget Aerodrome this evening on his way to Biarritz, where he intends to spend a golfing holiday of two or three weeks.—British Wireless.

The a.s. President Hoover arrives this evening at 8 o'clock and will sail at 4 a.m. to-morrow (Friday).

HINDENBURG SINKING RAPIDLY

LIKELY TO DIE AT ANY MOMENT

VON NEURATH AS SUCCESSOR?

Berlin, Aug. 2. It is understood that the doctors at Neudeck Castle have abandoned hope of saving President Hindenburg, who is in extremis and may die at any moment.

The official admission that President Hindenburg is dying has naturally caused a rumour that Germany's aged leader is already dead.

The rumour has been strengthened by the fact that the Cabinet is meeting almost immediately.

The flag over Neudeck Castle is still flying at full mast, however, and there seems no reason to believe that the Government would delay the announcement of Hindenburg's death.

HITLER'S LONG TALK.

It is learned that Herr Hitler and President Hindenburg had quite a long talk yesterday morning.

There were no witnesses whatsoever of the interview, which lasted for an hour, but there is no doubt that the principal topic of discussion was the question of Hindenburg's successor.

A report is now current that Baron von Neurath, the present Foreign Minister, will be the Hitler Government's nominee.

SUDDEN RELAPSE.

It is learned that President Hindenburg had a sudden and severe relapse last evening.

Before it occurred, he seemed reasonably well, speaking to his children and grand-children. He even discussed the harvest prospects.

A further report says that he also sent a message of loyalty to the ex-Kaiser.—Reuter.

MANOEUVRES AT SHANHAIKWAN

BRITISH TROOPS COMMENCE

Tientsin, Aug. 2. In spite of the objection by the Japanese to foreign troops holding military manoeuvres in the Shanhaikwan area the British forces commenced exercises yesterday at Erhlong-miao and will continue until August 4.

The British authorities have no intention of giving up treaty rights along the Peking Railway.—Central News.

STARTLING NAZI DOCUMENT

INCRIMINATING LIST OF NAMES

VIENNA, AUGUST 2. BELIEF THAT DR. ANTON RINTELIN HOLDS THE CLUES TO ALL THE RAMIFICATIONS OF THE NAZI INSURRECTIONARY PLOT IN AUSTRIA WAS STARTLINGLY CONFIRMED YESTERDAY BY THE DISCOVERY OF A REMARKABLE DOCUMENT WHICH PURPORTS TO GIVE A LIST OF THE PROPOSED APPOINTMENTS TO CABINET RANK HAD THE NAZI COUP D'ETAT SUCCEEDED.

It is alleged that the list of names, together with the posts the individuals mentioned were to occupy, was found after an extensive search of Dr. Rintelin's Vienna residence.

The list shows that Dr. Rintelin was to be the new Chancellor and that Theodore Habicht, Hitler's notorious Inspector for Austria, was to return to Vienna in the role of conquering hero to occupy the office of Vice-Chancellor.

MANY LEADERS QUAKING IN THEIR SHOES

These names have occasioned no surprise but some of the others have caused astonishment and naturally aroused considerable speculation about men not mentioned and who might also be involved.

The name of Herr Winkler, the former Vice-Chancellor and collaborator of Dr. Dollfuss, is, for instance, included. He would have become Minister of Agriculture.

DR. APOLD ARRESTED. Dr. Apold, the general director of the Alpine Montane Steel Works, is now under arrest. He was to have been Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Field-Marshal Bardolf and General Wagner also appear in the alleged incriminating document.

AUTHENTIC DOCUMENT? Authenticity seems to be imparted to the document in the circumstance that while Dr. Rintelin apparently took no active part in the attempted Nazi coup, he was announced as the new Chancellor from the broadcasting station, in the premature statement proclaiming the downfall of the Dollfuss Cabinet.

Moreover, his sympathy with the Nazi movement is well known. He resigned Cabinet rank in June 1933 because of his view that the Government should compromise with the Nazis.

RINTELIN'S THREAT. He has always been one of Austria's strong men and was known for years as the "Uncrowned King of Styria," hot-bed of Nazi intrigue. He was the natural man for the Nazis to turn to in search of a popular leader.

He now threatens to make a clean breast of all he knows in connection with the developments of the last fortnight, and there is reason to believe that there are a large number of highly-placed Austrians who are shivering in their shoes lest he should carry out his threat.

RAPIDLY RECOVERING. It is officially admitted that Dr. Rintelin is now rapidly recovering from the bullet wound which he inflicted upon himself last week in an attempt to commit suicide and that many precautionary measures have been taken already as the result of information which he has given to the authorities.—Reuter.

POPE TAKING A HOLIDAY

FIRST FOR TWELVE YEARS

(Special to "Telegraph")
Vatican City, Aug. 1. The Pope motored from the Vatican at 6.30 p.m. to-day to the Castel Gandolfo, where he will stay for six weeks' holiday.

This is his first holiday since he became Pope in 1922.

It is also interesting to note that he is the first Pope to reside outside the Vatican since 1870.

The Castel Gandolfo is twenty miles from Rome and was the regular Papal summer resort before 1870.—Reuter Special.

H.M.S. Tamar, the depot ship of the China Squadron, left dock this morning after refit and returned to her berth in the basin. She went into dock a fortnight ago and during that time the 9 p.m. gun salute was dispensed with. The practice will be resumed as from to-day.

Renewed precautions are being taken in Vienna as the result of fresh revelations. Photo shows armed troops on patrol in the streets of Vienna.

NEW LONDON EYE HOSPITAL

One of Best Equipped In World

London, Aug. 1. A new eye hospital, the biggest in Britain, and one of the best equipped in the world, is to be erected at a cost of £300,000 in South-East London near the site of the present eye hospital.—British Wireless.

FRAU DOLLFUSS TO SEE POPE

POIGNANT STORY OF PHONE CALL

(Special to "Telegraph")
Riccione, Aug. 1. Frau Dollfuss's plans for the future are very uncertain, but it is learned that she is leaving for Rome soon to see the Pope, accompanied by her two children.

A poignant story is related concerning little Eva's discovery of her father's death.

It is stated that the children learned that Dr. Dollfuss was dead as a result of the girl's intuition.

When her mother telephoned to Riccione from Vienna, Eva was called to the instrument and the first thing she asked was: "Are you coming back with daddy?"

A silence followed, then a sound of sob.

Eva had burst into tears and despite assurances that her father would return, she repeated again and again, "Daddy will never come back."—Reuter Special.

AIR MAIL APPOINTMENTS

London, Aug. 1. Rear Admiral Sir Murray Sutor, M.P., and Major General Sir Frederick Sykes have been appointed members of the Post Office Air Mail Panel and Group Captain Primrose, Royal Air Force (Retired), been appointed Air Mail Adviser to the Post Office.—British Wireless.

Two further cases of dog-bite have been reported to the police in one of which the young son of Mr. Shuster, of 68 Canton Road, Kowloon, was bitten by a dog belonging to his father. The lad has received medical treatment, and the animal has been sent to the Mataukok depot.

In the other case, Au Young, of 82 Lockhart Road, has been sent to the Government Civil Hospital after having been bitten by a dog belonging to Lai Shu-ling, of the same address. The dog has been sent to the Kennedy Town depot.

The "Red" menace has been definitely warded off as a result of counter-attacks by Government troops, who claim the capture of Hsueh Wo Ling.

The battle is alleged to have cost the "Reds" a thousand casualties.—Central News.

Secret British Wool Process

REVOLUTION IN TREATMENT

London, Aug. 1. A secret process, whereby the quality of British textile products will be improved and the costs of production lowered, has been evolved after extensive experiments in the use of ionized oils by the Wool Industries Research Association.

In the place of the present treatment of raw wool, which is first scoured with alkali and then softened with olive oil, and then again scoured to remove the oil, the new ionized oils evolved will both scour and soften the wool and can afterwards be removed by washing.

Wool thus treated is much whiter and softer than that produced by the old methods.

The new oils can also be effectively used for sisal, hemp, jute and other vegetable fibres, and the development is considered likely to prove of the utmost importance to the Crown Colonies.

NEW POSSIBILITIES.

The by-products of the various processes are also valuable and it is believed that the invention offers great possibilities for many Empire products which are at present of little value.

A large factory, capable of producing numerous types of ionized oils on a commercial scale has just been opened near London.—British Wireless.

MARRIES MAN

she first
FAILED TO ATTRACT

MEN are attracted by beautiful lips, but only by lips that have the natural color of radiant health. No man wants to marry a woman who looks as if she used paint. The way to give your lips the youthful glow that men admire, without risking that painted look, is Tangee Lipstick.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

Tangee is not paint. Instead it changes color on your lips. In the stick Tangee looks orange, but put it on. It takes on the shade of rose most becoming to you. Tangee becomes a very part of you, instead of a greasy coating, hence is longer-lasting than ordinary "paint" lipsticks. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base, so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. No drying, cracking or chapping when you use Tangee. Also in Thematical, a deeper shade for professional use.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look, make the face seem older.

PAINTED—Don't risk that painted look. It's chattering and men don't like it.

TANGEES—Invaluable natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that painted look.

NEW—Tangee Face Powder gives a soft underglow, makes the skin look younger. Contains the magic color-change principle of Tangee Lipstick. Blends with your complexion, prevents powdery, mask-like effect.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

When "Stand Up and Cheer!", Fox Film's new musical extravaganza, comes to the King's Theatre on Sunday, it will introduce no fewer than five songs that have already established themselves as song-hits wherever they have been heard. Lew Brown, associate producer with Winfield Shochan, of this most elaborate production, is the author of the songs, in collaboration with Jay Gorney. The songs, destined as the dance tunes of the world for 1934, are "Our Last Night Together", "Baby Take a Bow", "I'm Laughing", "Broadway's Gone Hill Billy", "She's Way Up There" and "Out of the Red". They are sung, in various teaming arrangements, by John Boles, James Dunn, Sylvia Froos, the sensational four-year-old "find" Shirley Temple, Nick Foran, "Aunt Jeannine", and Earl Dancer's famous chorus. In each of them there is an ensemble composed of the most beautiful girls the screen has ever placed on view. Although he does not sing any songs, Warner Baxter has the leading role in the picture. It was directed by Hamilton MacFadden from an original idea by Will Rogers and Philip Klein.

"Let's Fall in Love"

When a Hollywood producer strikes a responsive note among movie audiences with a new theme, it requires little foresight to predict a cycle of similar type films. Witness "Public Enemy" several years ago, or more recently, "Forty-Second Street". Practically every major studio has released a musical production to date, notably "Too Much Harmony", "Moonlight", and "Pretzels". "College Humor", "Gold Diggers of Broadway", and "Roman Scandals". In "Let's Fall in Love", the musical romance featuring Ann Southern and Edmund Lowe, showing to-day at the King's Theatre, the Columbia Studios have made the first important departure from the all-familiar backstage plot and have produced instead a dramatic musical of Hollywood studio life. A salient departure of "Let's Fall in Love" from the average musical is the absence of chorus and those unexcused girl routines which have become so common in backstage film musicals. Since there was no logical call for chorines in this story, the director refused to drag them in by the heels merely to conform to the accepted standard. The book of this musical of the studios is by Herbert Fields who created such notable New York successes as "Hit the Deck", "Fifty Million Frenchmen", "Pardon My English", "Present Arms", "The Conqueror", "Yankee", and many others. "Let's Fall in Love" does feature several songs and a lively musical score by Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler, but they are deftly and logically incorporated in the plot. These youthful composers are the New York song writers from the Harlem Cotton Club, who created "Stormy Weather", "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues", "Minnie the Moother", and many other popular hits of the day. Ann Southern is the well-known New York musical comedy star of "Smile", "Everybody's Welcome", and "Of Thee I Sing". Edmund Lowe plays the director who falls in love with her, and Gregory Ratoff is the motion picture producer. Others in the distinguished cast are Miriam Jordan, Arthur Jarrett and Greta Meyer.

"Coming Out Party"

When Jesse L. Lasky's latest production for Fox Film, "Coming Out Party", comes to the Alhambra Theatre to-day, it will open the gate and part the curtain on one of the most respectable rackets in American life—the launching of a debutante on a career of successful marriage. With the splendour of a battleship slipping down the ways except that the young debutante requires much more champagne for her launching—Fox Film has created a production that will open your eyes to many things you may have wondered about. Why do coming out parties cost $50,000? Why are there three men to every girl at these parties? Why is it that a certain hand leader plays at all exclusive debutante parties? Your education is not complete until you get your look-in at this old American institution of salesmanship by the country's highest society. And in addition to this, there is a beautiful love story that makes "Coming Out Party" a truly superb film. The cast is headed by Gene Raymond, Alison Skipworth, Nigel Bruce, Harry Green and Gilbert Emery. The production was directed by John Blystone from the screen play by Gladys Unger and Jesse L. Lasky, Jr.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Headwork Counts in Makeup

EXPERIMENT TO GET COIFFURE FOR YOUR TYPE

By Alicia Hart

One of the reasons that coiffure experts and noteworthy cosmeticians are so successful in pleasing their customers is that they dare to experiment a bit now and then and, once they've proved the value of the experiment, have sense enough to leave well enough alone. The wise woman, particularly one who can't go to beauty shops often, should make an unprejudiced check-up on her—personal appearance occasionally and then do a bit of experimenting herself.

One popular stage star confesses that she went along for years, trying unsuccessfully to get a part in a play and that it was not until she tried a new hair dress and some rather exotic makeup that she was able to make any sort of impression on the producers.

Then there is the famous New York coiffure expert who says that any woman who has fair features and passable hair can look really lovely if she'll just use the correct makeup and wear her hair in a becoming fashion. The two pictures (shown here) illustrate his point.

On the right is a young woman who wears her hair in tight waves—probably because it's hard to break the habit—and pulls the dips

over her cheeks and forehead, breaking an otherwise smooth and flattering profile line. To make matters worse, she puts her rouge on in two small spots on the cheeks, neglecting to blend the edges, and smears lipstick on white skin as well as lips. She completes the bad picture by frowning.

The large picture is of the same young woman after a famous cosmetician showed her how to make up correctly and how to do her hair in a new way. As you can see, her rouge is carefully blended, lipstick follows the contour of her lips and her hair is softly waved backward, allowing her lovely forehead to show. She's smiling now—and no wonder!

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Rinse Off Deodorants

By Alicia Hart

Deodorants have ringed seats in the daintiness game. An efficacious one is as necessary to your charm and beauty as clean clothes and correct cosmetics. There can be no hard and fast rule for its use—some need to use a deodorant daily and others only once or twice a week—but the women who never need one at all are few and far between.

If the skin under your arms is very sensitive, you'll probably choose a mild deodorant. If not, the double-strength varieties are better for you since they have to be used less frequently. If, for some reason or other, you do not wish to check perspiration but prefer to use some preparation that takes the odour out of it, there are creams and lotions that do just that. You might get sample bottles and jars of several types and try each one before you buy a large amount.

Remember that a deodorant should be used after you have bathed, allowed to dry and then rinsed off before you put on either nightgown or street clothes. Never use one immediately after shaving or applying a depilatory. It may be that a strong deodorant will make your skin itch and feel uncomfortable. If that happens, dust under the arms with powder or rub on a bit of your nourishing cream.

Exercises to Keep Hands Supple

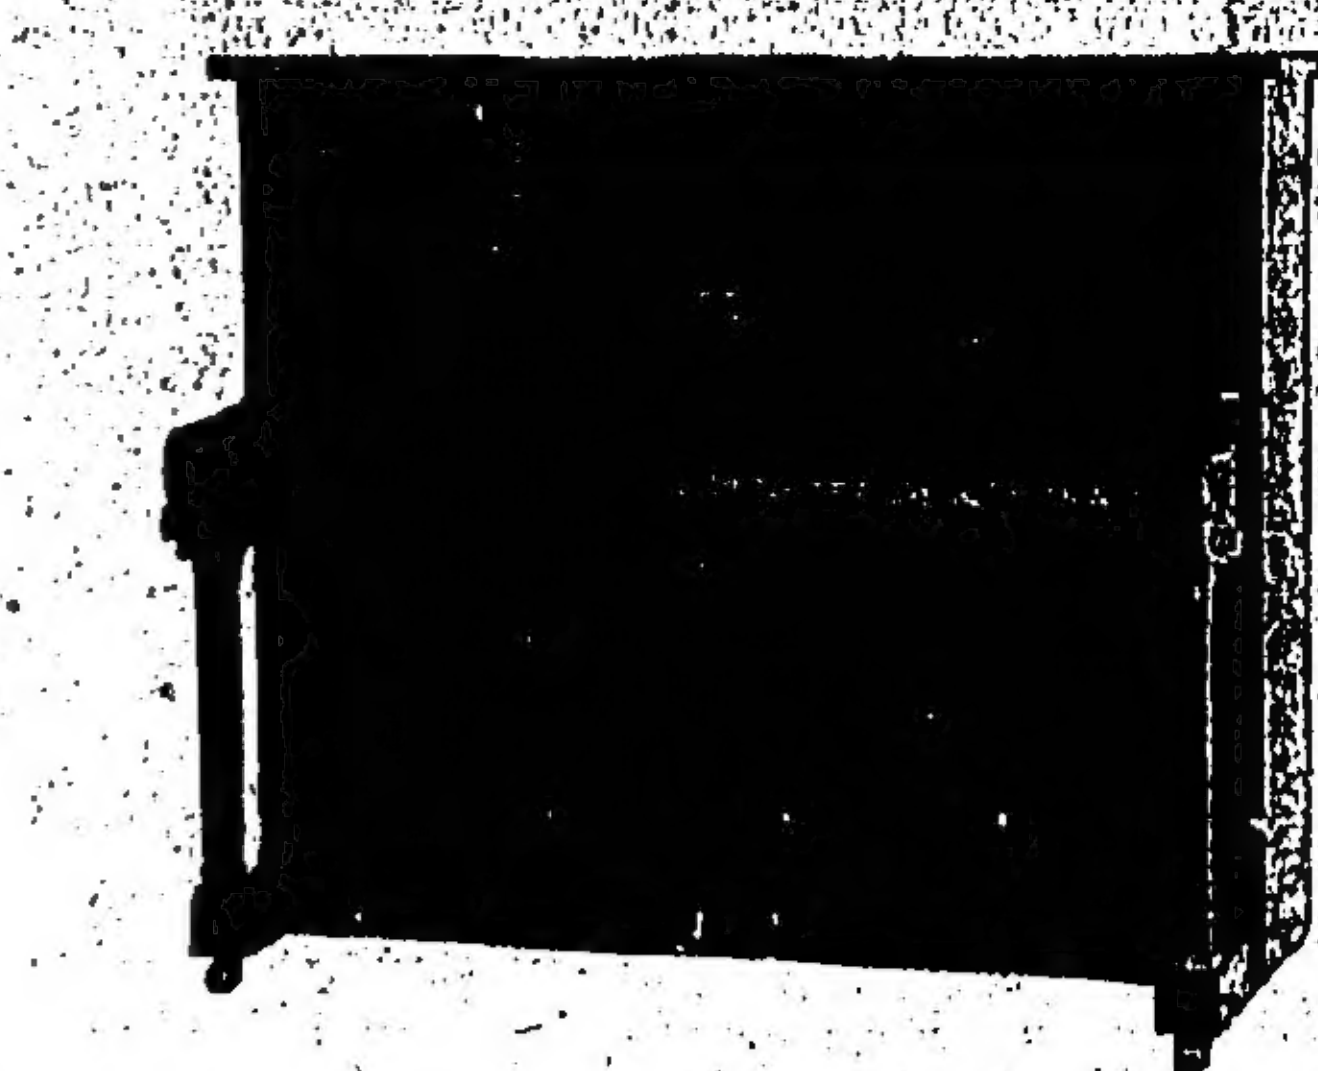

By Alicia Hart

Beauty, as far as hands and wrists are concerned, is much more than skin deep. No matter how white, smooth and well-kept looking your hands may be, they will be twice as lovely if they are graceful and supple.

Plan to devote a few minutes each day to exercises that will loosen tense muscles and stiff joints in your hands and wrists. Most exercises of this type are simple and can be done while seated. Here are some that you might try:

Relax arms, hands and wrists and then imagine that you're trying to shake water from your finger tips. Let the fingers snap together with each downward shake, keeping shoulders and arms perfectly relaxed so that they, as well as wrists and fingers, are exercised. Repeat at least 10 times and then go on to the next step.

Make believe that you're pulling taffy. Stretch the arms outward, closing and opening the hands as you do it. Then spread the fingers wide apart several times. Now, raising the arms above the head, wave them backward and forward, keeping the wrists and fingers relaxed.

SOPHIE KERR'S LATEST SUCCESS IN ROMANTIC PROBLEM FICTION "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially her mother, Mrs. Terry, that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until Howard Jackson broke the engagement. Jane forced on him and married Amy. Unable to bear the sight of Amy's happiness, Jane obtained a job in a New York real estate office.

Jane is clever and soon is making an excellent salary. She has an affair with ROBERT THORPE, who is married. Later she finds out that he is married. She then tells the story of her child she dismisses him contemptuously.

In her desperate plight Jane turns to Amy for help. Howard is touring Germany and Amy comes to New York. She stays until the baby is born and then, horrified because Jane insists on giving her daughter away, agrees to take it with the understanding that Jane never shall reclaim the child.

CHAPTER XVIII

Now that she had taken the child for her own Amy was in a turmoil of doubt. What would Howard say when he came back and found that she had done this without consulting him? What would her father and mother think? And what an exacting, overwhelming responsibility she had assumed! Taking proper care of an infant is not, she discovered at once, a mere matter of feminine instinct, but an expert and complicated craft, with a considerable dash of science.

Miss McNeal instructed, disapprovingly, on bathing, clothing, routine. Doctor Lacey also instructed, without enthusiasm, on formulas of feeding, mixtures and temperatures. Amy tried to learn everything at once, for she wanted to get away, to go home, to be out of sight and sound of Jane. Because the revelation that had come to her at Jane's light-hearted riddling herself of the child persisted, increased. She hid it as far as she could, but it was there and affected their relation. They were drawing away from each other. Jane was stronger each day and her only concern was to put this whole sorry business behind her and get back to work. Her satisfaction was almost sippant. She couldn't, she said very often, have had a better break.

But she knew how Amy felt. She knew that Amy could not gloss over or condone what she had done. It amused Jane a little that Amy shouldn't be shocked at her having the child, only at her giving it away. It annoyed her, too. She did not fancy Amy's sitting in judgment on her and there were moments when she considered taking the child away from Amy and sending it to be adopted as she had planned in the first place.

This she did not quite dare to do. She was, though she would not have owned it even to herself, afraid of Amy's anger and contempt, and so long as they were hidden, she could pretend they did not exist and that everything was right between them.

The honesty that she had used to Amy before the child was born disappeared. Neither could Amy be honest. So they talked together as little as possible. Amy concerned herself with the child and tried to still her great anxiety for Howard's safety, for no word had come from him.

The reports of Americans marooned in Europe and their trials and tribulations were now coming through and added to her fears. She planned to go back to New York at the first moment Doctor Lacey said a child so very young might safely travel. The apartment was crowded and uncomfortable and Emma sulked about the extra work. It would be a relief to everyone when Amy could go.

When that day finally did arrive there was so much to do to get ready, everything was confused and hurried, that there was no chance for any private conversation between the two friends. Jane and Miss McNeal both went with Amy to the train, established her and the child in a drawing-room, and then the nurse said goodbye and hurried off. Amy and Jane were left in the tight stuffy little place.

"I suppose I ought to be very grateful," Jane began. In the dim light she looked blooming and carefree. Her colour had come back. She had gone out to the hairdresser while Amy was packing. She had put on a smart frock and hat.

Amy glanced up from arranging pillows carefully about the child and, seeing Jane's smile, her constraint dropped and her despairing leaped out. "You needn't be grateful. All you need to do is to remember that this child is mine. And if you ever try to claim her I'll tell the whole story."

Jane struck back, subtly, sweetly, but with the sharpest blow she could deal. "I'm glad to give the child to you, Amy, since you have none of your own—if you hadn't taken Howard Jackson away from me this would have been his child, remember. I shan't claim her."

"Howard didn't want you," said Amy, "and you know it. I don't suppose he'll want this child of yours either—that's one reason why you must never claim her."

Jane was pale now, but she recovered her sense. "Don't let's quarrel again. It's so foolish to quarrel."

"I'm not quarrelling with you, but I won't stand your lies. You want always to twist things so you're not to blame. Well, this can't be twisted. I've always loved you, Jane, no matter what you did, but this is—I don't know—it's as if you—you had no integrity in your soul."

"Integrity in my soul! That's only a fancy phrase! It doesn't mean anything. Why don't you look at the whole thing sensibly as I've asked you to before. What on earth would I do with a baby?"

"This isn't a baby, it's your baby, or it was—now it's mine. If we talked for a thousand years we'd never agree. Stay out of my life, Jane—I don't want you there any more. Goodbye." She did not offer to shake hands, she did not want to touch or come near Jane.

Jane waited a second. "Good-bye," she said at last, and went out. Through the window Amy could see her walking quickly along the platform, head up, slight and young and buoyant.

"I hope I never see her again," thought Amy. "I wouldn't have believed—no, I wouldn't have believed—she didn't even look at the baby, or say a word about her or to her." She was trembling, shaken by her rare passionate anger. She could not remember when she had ever been so angry before. The porter came and one part of her mind busied itself with practical matters, fresh tea to pack the supply of prepared food for the child, and then the necessary warming of it at the right intervals; she sent for something to eat for herself, she arranged her baggage and wraps for the most space. But all the time another part of her was back with Jane, repeating the warning never to intrude again into the peace and truth of her life.

In the morning Amy's father and mother were both at the train and when they saw her they ran toward her exclaiming together: "Word's come through from Howard—he's in Norway and he's all right." Her father caught her: "Look out, dear, don't faint!" for she had turned weak and dizzy with the joy of the good news. Then they all talked at the same time and Amy looked from one to the other, resting in their sure and stable affection, returning it, feeling herself bound round once more in its dear familiar security. As they got into a cab Mrs. Lowe took the baby. "How tiny!" she said. "Neither of us quite believed it when you wrote you'd adopted a baby. What's her name?"

"Mother, she hasn't any. You might choose one. I'm too worn out. Do you think it was a crazy thing to do? Do you, Father?" "Oh, rather crazy. But nice. She looks a healthy young one," answered her father.

"She's a darling, very good. Only there's a lot more to taking care of babies than I imagined. We'll talk about her after awhile. Tell me about Howard, every single thing you know."

They didn't, it now seemed, know very much beyond the fact that he and Professor Elliott had managed to get to Norway, but how and when they would be able to leave there no one could tell. The State Department was trying to arrange passage. "I knew this war was coming," said Professor Lowe, "but I didn't expect it quite so soon. It should have been two or three years later."

"They didn't consult you!" mocked his wife gently.

The cab turned off toward the Crescent. "Oh Mother," said Amy, "I won't go home with you. I think I ought to get back into my own house and establish the baby there. She has so much paraphernalia it will mess up your kitchen and bother old Lillian."

"But darling, you're more than welcome to mess up the kitchen and I don't believe Lillian will mind very much."

"Mother, you know she'll rave." In the end it was arranged that Amy should go to her own house and that her mother would stay with her for the first few days. "But I'll go on home now," said Mrs. Lowe, "and bring back things for lunch, and your old cradle."

"And any of my old baby clothes you've got tucked away. She has hardly anything to wear." (To Be Continued.)

AMERICAN POOL CHIEF GIVES ASSURANCE

New York, Aug. 1. The manager of the Cotton Pool, Mr. Johnston, today reiterated that the pool's holdings would not be dumped on the market or disposed of in a manner calculated to disturb unduly either the spot cotton market or general economic conditions.

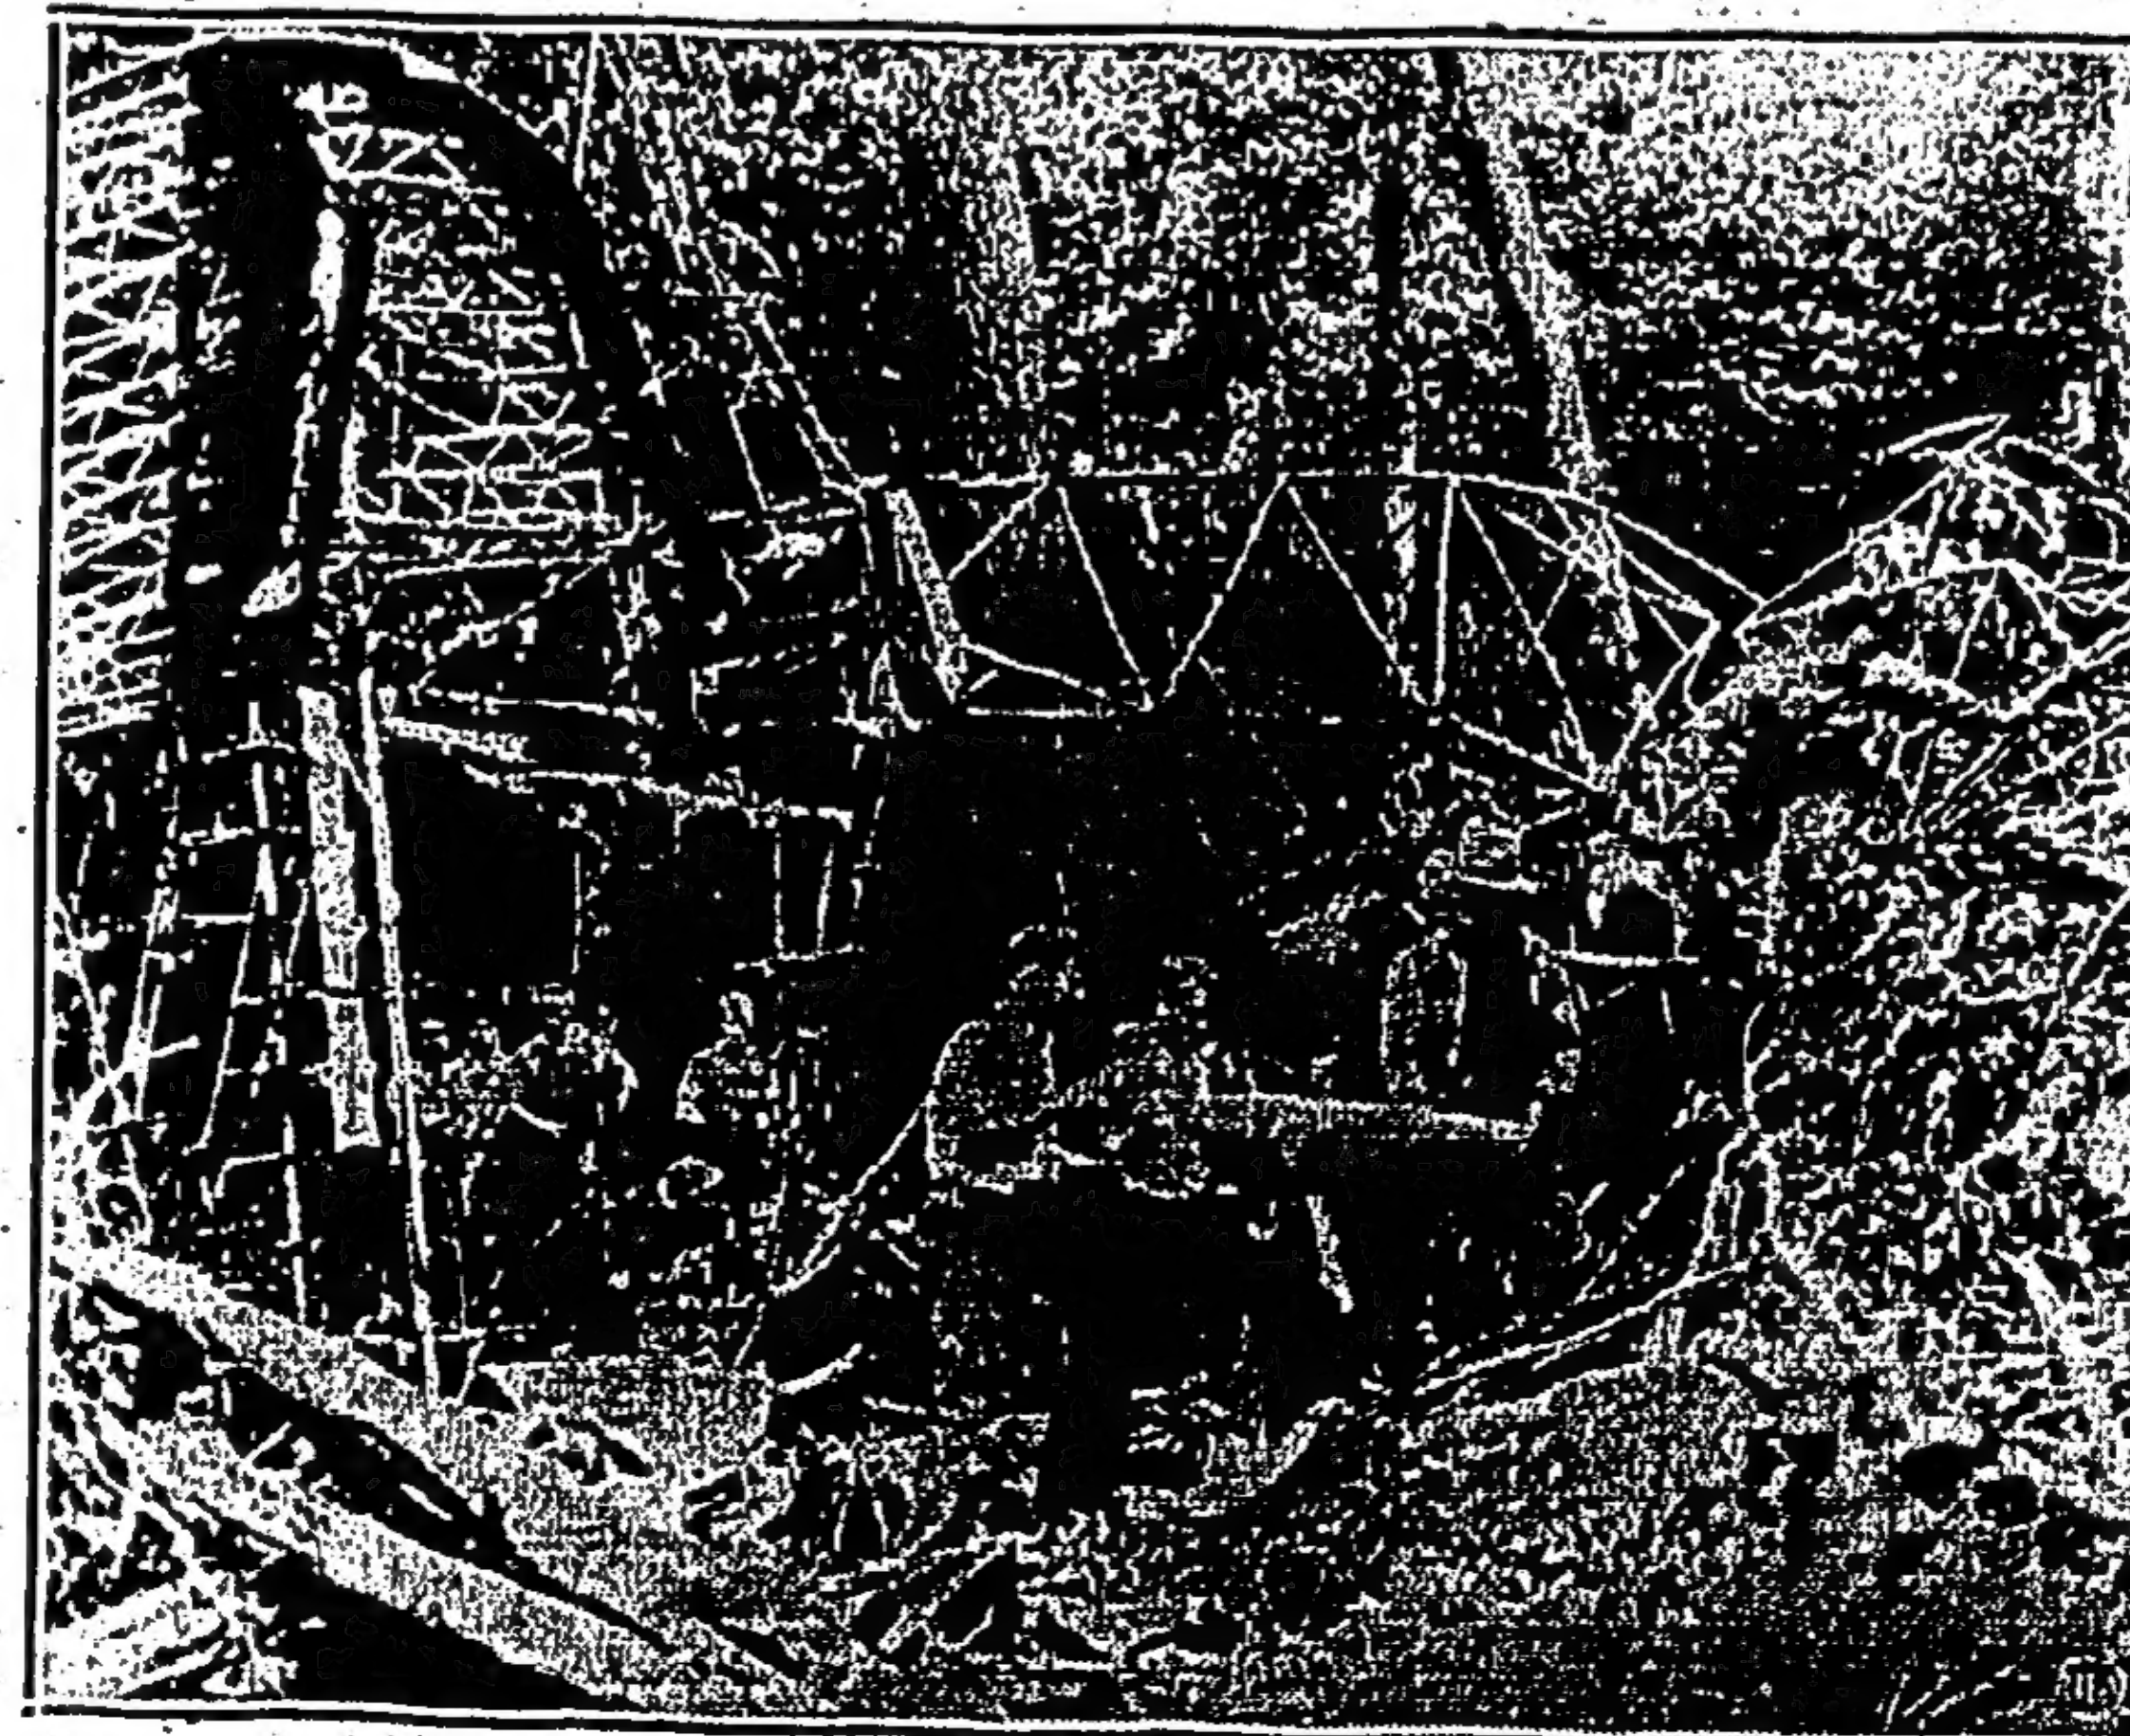

There had been some apprehension that America might dump her cotton stocks, with a consequent disastrous effect upon the market.

Terminating an impressive meeting of 50,000 Roman Catholics in Cleveland, Knights of St. John, shown here, formed a huge hollow cross about an altar while within its lanes, more than 1,000 priests and acolytes massed, as the Host was raised in benediction. The throng had gathered to welcome the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, archbishop of Bologna, on the first visit of an apostolic delegate to the diocese.

A gleam of silver against a tropical background, the Macon is seen floating majestically over Miami, Fla., on its way to join the U. S. fleet. The air giant carried a crew of 100.

This twisted and charred wreckage was all that remained of the Curtiss Condor airplane which crashed near Livingston Manor, N. Y., in the Catskill hills, carrying two pilots, a stewardess, and four passengers to death. Members of the searching party are shown holding part of the propeller, with the skeleton of the tail framework secured at the left. Theory that explosion of a fuel tank caused the fatal plunge was proved after pliers, acid, was found in luggage of a passenger.

BRITAIN'S AIR FRONTIER

Whether Mr. Baldwin intended to attach any special significance to his "Rhine frontier" declaration or not, it is clear that it is being invested abroad with an importance which may or may not be justified. In plain terms, Mr. Baldwin says that with the growth of aviation, old frontiers have disappeared, with the result that for defensive purposes Britain's frontier is on the Rhine. The inference, of course, is that if invasion ever seriously threatens Britain, the danger will come from that quarter. This possibility has obviously been much in the mind of the British Government lately, proof of which fact is to be found in the statements, guarded in character, admittedly, which have emanated from official quarters in support of the decision to embark on large-scale expansion of the Royal Air Force. The whole basis of the Government's plans rests on the point that in the present troubled state of Europe, Britain cannot afford to trust her defenses to an Air Force of lesser strength than that of her aerially strongest neighbour. Admittedly, Germany does not at the moment fall within the latter category, but in Mr. Baldwin's references to the possible use of civil craft for bombing purposes, there is to be detected an anxiety that Britain should not run the risk of being caught napping. Since the Government's decision to build up a strong air arm, there has been a disposition in some quarters to interpret the move as indicating that Britain has lost faith in the efficacy of the maintenance of peace by the collective system of guarantees. Indeed the London News Chronicle recently went so far as to declare that neither Mr. Baldwin nor Sir John Simon really believe in that system. "Thus," remarked the journal, "the world is the drift to a shambles of another 1914 because those who should have been the guardians of the peace lacked both the courage of their professions and the sincerity to live up to them." How much truth there is in the charge, the future will reveal; it may be merely another way of stating that certain facts disclosing the grim realities of the situation have lately come to light. Britain has most decidedly shown a marked reluctance recently to enter into any fresh commitments on the Continent, and the Government attitude on that point certainly reflects public opinion. One commentator on the situation, after pointing out that Britain fears attack from the air while France fears attack from the air and the land as well, caustically remarked

NOTES OF THE DAY

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Bishop Hall has put forward a strong plea for the abolition of capital punishment in Hongkong. He argues from the humanitarian point of view and urges an experimental suspension for twenty years, doubtless convinced in his own mind that the results would justify final abandonment of the life for a life doctrine. It is safe to assume that any campaign of this kind, sponsored by Church leaders, would command widespread public sympathy. It is a popular appeal in itself. The manifest sincerity behind the arguments advanced by the Bishop may easily sway many who have formed no convictions one way or the other on the issues raised. And there must be few who have considered the subject from a purely academic standpoint, free of the prejudices induced by particular murder trials, and can contemplate with equanimity the legalised slaying of a fellow-man, whatever his offence against Society.

DETERRENT VALUES

The cases for and against capital punishment need not be recited here. It is sufficient to stress that the main justification, the deterrent value of the death penalty, is one impossible of accurate assessment. No-one can form an estimate of the uncommitted crimes, those instances where the will to murder has been present and fear or caution have intervened. In this connection, the results of abolition in other countries are of little practical value when Hongkong's problem is being considered. No proper standard of comparison exists for gauging the potential results of abolition of the death penalty in this Colony alongside those in, say, Holland. Psychology comes in importantly. Imprisonment for life would possess more terrors for many men than the thought of the hangman's noose. Would it be more humanitarian to rob such a man of his liberty or to end it quickly? If common humanity is being considered, the study must not be confined to the feelings of those whose sensibilities are revolted by the taking of a man's life. His own, particularly if he is a victim of circumstances, are worth more thought.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE

Probing the issues on these lines any further would quickly get the investigator into deep water. Were the law able to differentiate, for instance, it would probably insist upon imposing the penalty which possessed the greater terrors for the condemned man. It is easier to fall back upon the principle that legal murder should have no place in a well-balanced society. Can this be claimed for Hongkong? It is difficult to accept the Bishop's view that Hongkong, of all places in the Empire, is a suitable laboratory for experiments in social reform. It has always lagged, and it probably always will. Moreover, the question, simply stated by Bishop Hall as a principle to be aimed at, is hardly so simple when seen from the practical viewpoint. Public opinion within the borders of the Colony cannot be the dominant influence. The Government could not take a single step in the direction suggested without the authority of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. It is hardly conceivable that Whitehall would authorise removal of capital punishment from the Colony's Ordinances while it remains in the Laws of England. The Bishop may remind us of the era while use of the term "defeatism" we can only plead that we are compelled to a distinction between what is possible in the personal life and what is possible under Crown Colony administration.

that "Sir John Simon is willing to co-operate with France to make the air safe for England, but refuses to go anything like as far as to make the land safe for France." That is a rather crude interpretation of the position, and one which depicts British foreign policy in a somewhat unkindly light, but the element of truth in it is that Britain has at length come to realise her vulnerability to aerial attack; also that, as Mr. Baldwin has now so aptly expressed the position, her real defence frontier is located on the Continent. The suggestion, however, that this declaration implies any fresh obligation on Britain's part to come to the aid of France, if attacked, scarcely seems warranted. The Locarno agreement could be invoked in such an event, within the limits stipulated in that understanding. Beyond this, Britain is not prepared to go; that has been made quite clear again, and again within recent times. Summed up, British policy may be said to be one of hoping for the best, coupled with a determination to be prepared for the worst.

TRAINING FOR LIVING

The Norris Educational Plan which looks toward fitting men and women for a New Social Order.

By HOWARD COLBY IVES

"ALL Hope Restored to Those Who Enter Here." Such might well be the legend inscribed in bright lights over the town of Norris, rapidly assuming physical, social and educational coherence in northeastern Tennessee.

When Arthur E. Morgan, then in charge of the great project for controlling floods on the Miami River, received in 1920 an unexpected call to the presidency of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio, an all but moribund institution, one may imagine that he little thought that fourteen years later he would be directing an educational institution covering 42,000 square miles with some millions of students who are going to learn many fundamental lessons in living, whether they enroll in any classes or not. In a sense this is rhetorical hyperbole. In a deeper sense it is a plain statement of fact.

When Henry Ward Beecher auctioned a slave girl from his pulpit, he did more to educate the nation in the horrors of slavery than any amount of preaching could do. So, to the thoughtful, and that means all of us who are beginning to hope, the whole Tennessee River Basin is becoming an object lesson and a training school.

The present educational system, which has little bearing on a rapidly changing order, is, manifestly, an anachronism. The fact that every year thousands of students are turned out of our schools and universities fitted for trades, arts, professions and business, which have little or no use for them is a falling barometer threatening violent social stormy weather. Antioch College was Dr. Morgan's answer to the question posed by our national life: "How shall we fit our youth for twentieth-century life?" Norris and the whole valley is an answer to the same question couched in Homeric terms.

Employed at Norris Dam and Norris townships are approximately 4,000 persons. Ninety-eight per cent of them, again speaking approximately, are men. Practically all of them are drawn from the towns, villages and hills of the basin. They have been carefully chosen from many thousands of applicants because of their character, ability in some particular direction, general intelligence and desire for self-improvement. Most of them, if not all, are of pure American pioneering stock. They are distinguished by an independence of spirit impatient of dictatorial control. They are proud of their hill-country heritage, free from most of the modernistic dissipations and with a deep affection for their home land. To them is being offered an opportunity for self-support on the one hand, and on the other a wide scope of training for life under new conditions, or, as it may be said, with a swift, wise, adaptation of means to ends unparalleled in the history of education.

The basic idea at the Norris training schools seems to be that consideration for human life should take precedence over every conventional educational prototype. It is taken for granted that the individual should be trained to meet every condition which may arise in a rapidly changing environment. This is not only a practical educational ideal, it is also an indispensable objective in any attempt to aid the individual to solve his own economic problem.

At Norris nothing is overlooked that tends to foster a reasonable expectation of success within the scope of the student-worker's capacity. This is best shown by an examination of the four main objectives in the Training for Living programme, as outlined by Howard L. Briggs, superintendent of the Trades Training School.

First—The student is trained to be more efficient in the work he is already accustomed to. If he is a machinist, he is helped to become a better one. If he is an electrician, or farmer, or auto mechanic, or carpenter or mason, or draftsman, he is given the opportunity not only to establish himself more firmly in his chosen trade, but also to learn allied trades or jobs, so that he may be more independent of seasonal depressions and sudden trade fluctuations. Here is where the co-ordination of farm and factory work fits in.

Second—His training should fit him to take part in the work offered by the new industries which cheaper hydroelectric power is already attracting to the valley. The TVA programme contemplates the promotion of a balanced industrial policy for the whole district, which necessitates workers who can think in terms of varied employment.

Third—The farm-trained boy is rotated in a variety of skills and materials, so that he may become economically a more self-sustained unit in his natural environment under the new conditions of an electrically equipped farm and home. And also that he may be able to fill the very important position of exemplar and instructor to his fellow citizens when he returns to his home country.

And fourth—Norris hopes to provide an object lesson for the country in the economic independence which such a training school may teach. For here is no institution with millions of dollars of endowment, nor is it a drain on the taxpayers. The actual cost is practically nil. The auto-mechanic shop does all the repair and rebuilding work on the hundreds of automobiles and trucks used by the Authority. The poultry farm students do the work which provides eggs and chickens for the cafeteria. The wood-working shop utilizes the lumber cut from the Norris property, and the student, while learning carpentry, makes furniture for the Norris homes, and benches for the shops they work in, while the student in scientific agriculture assists in providing food for the town. Even the equipment for the four main training shops, costing originally many thousands of dollars, has been salvaged from the Muscle Shoals shops, where for sixteen years it has been rusting away, or purchased secondhand for 25 per cent of its original value. It is said that if the Government should wish to dispose of its equipment after the dam is built, which, of course, it would not do, for the whole plan pre-supposes permanent (Continued on Page 7.)

"I want something for my chest."

The Very Idea!

BOOK OF ASUWERUS
CHAPTER 8.

NOW Asuwerus made him ready to preach to the people of Kong even that which the Gods of Eng had commanded him.

2. And he commanded with himself saying: In what manner shall I go up and preach unto this people, for they are numerous and of divers tribes?

3. So he sought counsel of the gods in his own chamber and prayed. And a small still voice called to him, out of the darkness saying: Asuwerus, and he answered: Here am I.

4. And the voice said: Go thou up and preach unto the Levites, for they are the chosen People, and the tribes hearken unto them. They do a thing; and the residue of the people follow as a flock of sheep.

5. So Asuwerus girded up his loins and set forth. In his hand he carried a staff, yea in his right hand, for the way was long and the ascent thereof steep.

6. And he toiled grievously, for the going up was hard, and he was sore oppressed and cried: Oh! that the gods had commanded me a chariot, even a chariot of fire.

7. So that my burden might be eased, and the ascent made easy to my feet. For I am old and the way plaugeth me heavily.

8. After many days Asuwerus beheld at length the dwelling places of the Levites, and behold they were good.

CHAPTER 9.

The Levites were a pious people who ruled the land of Kong and poured numerous libations before the gods. Their ways were cast in pleasant places.

2. Their houses were of stone even dressed stone, and carved with all manner of carving. They stood on high.

3. And a cloud stood round about as it were a cloud of glory, so that when they spoke, they were heard but seen not and the people marvelled.

4. For the Tribes of the Plain abused themselves saying verily these act as Gods. They prostrated themselves before them.

5. Now Asuwerus was sore afraid when he beheld the state of the people and said: Who am I that I should preach unto such as these?

6. For they are mighty and serve mighty Gods, yea they command all things, possessing many deeds. And he wrestled with his Soul.

7. But the Voice comforted him saying: Content thee and go up for thou shalt surely prevail. Go in peace.

8. For the people of Kong are mighty but the Gods of Eng are mightier yet.

CHAPTER 10.

So Asuwerus purified him and arrayed himself in sackcloth and put ashes on his head, and he went up and prophesied unto the Levites.

2. And he cried: Harken ye, oh ye people of the land to the voice of the Gods of Eng. Yet Once, perchance it shall be a little while, the desire of all nations shall come.

3. For there shall be war in the land and many enemies shall attack, therefore be ye prepared. Put off your purple and your fine linen and your life of ease.

4. And gird ye with a strong buckler that ye be not taken in surprise and perish.

5. For ye have strong defences on your cloud, and mighty ships upon the waters but they shall avail ye nought.

6. Prepare ye against the spirits of the air for their number shall be great. They shall darken the sun at noon.

7. And they shall pour down upon ye unclean vapours that ye shall see not, neither shall ye breathe. Ye shall be utterly undone.

8. Therefore prepare ye spirits likewise that shall command the air and destroy those that come against ye before they reach your shores.

9. And the Gods of Eng shall come to your aid. But only after many days. So Asuwerus finished and went to his place.

WELCOMED BACK FROM ABROAD

After a four months' tour in Europe and America, five members of the Kwangtung Provincial Government Air Mission returned to Hongkong early this morning by the Italian liner Conte Verde en route to Canton.

The party consists of General Wong Kwong-yue, Commander of the Canton Air Force, Chang de Suen, Adj. General of the Air Bureau, Ding Gai-chue, Second Squadron Commander, Mui Lung-on, Chief of the Aeroplane Factory, and Cheng Shu-ling, Secretary of the Air Bureau. A number of Canton officials and air officers welcomed the mission, which will leave for Canton to-morrow evening.

Interviewed, General Wong Kwong-yue said that during the four months' stay abroad the mission visited England, America, France, Italy and Germany and were thoroughly impressed by the progress of the foreign air forces. The mission called at the Air Ministries of the countries visited and in each case they were accorded the most cordial welcome. Opportunity was taken to see numerous aerodromes, aerodromes and aircraft factories.

Answering a query, General Wong Kwong-yue said the rumours that the mission had purchased big consignments of aeroplanes abroad were not true, as the mission was instructed to confine its work to observation and study of aerial technique.

FOR NEWSPRINT SUPPLIES

JUDGMENT AGAINST LOCAL JOURNAL

A local vernacular newspaper had judgment for $1,786 and costs awarded against them in their absence by Mr. Justice Jackson Pulsne Judge, at the Supreme Court this morning when two separate actions were brought for breach of contract by Bitzer & Co., of Queen's Building.

Defendants were the Tin Nam newspaper, alias the Tin Nam Daily Press, of 63, Hollywood Road, and the actions against them were in respect of supplies of paper.

Mr. G. S. Ford, of Messrs. Wilkinson & Gird, represented plaintiffs, who were awarded judgment.

ency, it could make a goodly profit on its investment, besides the inestimable values added to human capacity for economic and social well-being.

Is it any wonder that the visitor to Norris feels power in the very air? Not only the power suggested by the building of dams and strings of transmission lines, which within a few years will put millions of additional horsepower at the disposal of factories and homes, but the far greater power suggested by the faces and bearing of men who, perhaps for the first time in their lives, are facing a future lightened by a well-founded hope.

ANGLO-POLISH TRADE

GROUND CLEARED FOR AGREEMENT

London, Aug. 1.

A discussion has been proceeding during the last five weeks with the delegation from Poland which has come to London for negotiation on trade matters.

Considerable progress has been made in clearing the ground, and the discussions will be resumed early in the Autumn.—British Wireless.

Major K. P. Atkinson, M.C., R.A., K.S.O.II at Command Hongkong will proceed on leave shortly and will be succeeded by Major G. R. P. Roupell, V.C., of the East Surrey Regiment, who will arrive on the troopship Somersetshire on November 22.

The Hongkong Government delegates to the Kowloon-Canton Railway Conference tendered a complimentary luncheon to the Chinese delegates in the Jacobson Room of the Hongkong Hotel yesterday. Many prominent local business men attended the luncheon and were introduced to the visiting delegates. Government representatives present were Messrs. H. J. Breen, R. D. Walker and H. K. Holmes. The Chinese delegates present were Messrs. Chang Wei-zu, Li Hsien-ten, Hu Chi-hsien, Mok Kai-fuk, Ho Tong-chiu, and Hsin Yuan.

GREAT PIONEER

MORRISON IN TEACHER AND DOCTOR ROLES

An apt and able survey of the highlights of Robert Morrison's pioneering enterprises was broadcast last night by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen from ZBW.

Dr. Allen said: In the talk I gave yesterday at the Rotary Club, I tried to present Morrison as a translator and as a servant of the East India Company in the difficult days which preceded the cession of Hongkong. He was emphatically a pioneer, and to-day have entered into his labours. We can fix certain points in his life from which lines a century long can be drawn to our own day; it is for us to continue them into the future. If what I said yesterday might have gone under the title 'Morrison the Pioneer,' I would choose as my subject to-night 'Morrison: A Century After.' Let us imagine Morrison come back, not to Canton and Macao this time, but to Hongkong.

If He Could See

I have no doubt in what direction he would first look for the justification of his work. He would be proud of the work which the London Missionary Society which sent him out, has continued both here and on beyond that, the growth of a vigorous Chinese Christian Church, capable not merely of self-support but also of shouldering a large measure of responsibility for the evangelization of the New Territories. When he died, China was still a closed land, missionary work was under the ban of the Imperial authorities, and his own and his colleagues' converts were but ten in number. The century which has elapsed since then has seen the rise of China as a vigorous Christian community, tried in the fires of persecution, and able to offer to the nation leadership in every department of its life.

We have not only Morrison's work among us; it is of interest to note that we have still some of the tools with which he did it, for instance, his English Bible, his Chinese Dictionary, and the copy of a Chinese manuscript in the British Museum which Morrison had made for him while still in London.

Newspaper Man

Though Morrison himself died before Hongkong came into British hands, his son was to play no small part in its early history. He had advised his son Robert not to be a missionary but rather to be a merchant, but he was himself disenchanted with the missionary's calling, but he thought the ideal career in the Far East was one which combined both. Robert did not take his advice, however; his knowledge of the language and the people made him extremely valuable, and he became the first Chinese Secretary to the Hongkong Government. I understand that he eventually occupied a seat on the Legislative Council.

On the shelves of the old City Hall Library you will come across files of the 'Hongkong Register' for 1849 to 1852. That was originally the 'Canton Register,' which Morrison served as sub-editor, and in the columns of which he championed the cause of freedom of speech. It is characteristic of the man that his achievement gave him $300 a year, not for himself, but for any charitable object he liked to name.

First School

I will now pass on to trace briefly the connection between Morrison's work and education in the Colony. His mind turned early in this direction, and it was clear that neither Canton nor Macao could give him the site for a school. He needed a place where security was available, and he looked therefore to Malacca. Here, in 1818, he founded his Anglo-Chinese College, with his colleague Milne as the Principal. Out of the salary he received from the East India Company, he gave £1,000 down, promising to supplement it by an annual grant of £100 for 5 years. The object of the institution was stated to be 'the cultivation of English and Chinese literature. In order to the spread of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.' After the cession of Hongkong, there was no longer any need to remain at such a distance from China, and Dr. James Legge therefore moved the College here. But education in those days had to wait in the waters than those it is called upon to navigate at present, and Dr. Legge in 1856 came to the conclusion that the College was not fulfilling its purpose and should be closed.

Chinese Culture

The name and spirit of the old Anglo-Chinese College have since been revived in the present Ying Wah College, but they cannot be said to continue it without a break. But that action of Morrison's original plan which contemplated the study by foreigners of Chinese culture has still to be realized. One can only hope that the opening of the Pung Pin Shan Library and the acquisition of the Chinese section of the Hongkong Club Library will serve as milestones along the road to such a goal, and our own University functioning as a centre for study and research in things Chinese.

It is significant of the importance attached by Morrison to education that when, six months only after his death, the foreign community in Canton resolved to secure some sort of permanent memorial, the decision was taken to found a school. This was opened in Macao under an American teacher, no one being forthcoming from England. It was transferred in due course to Hongkong, where a site was given for it on Morrison Hill. But it lived there only a few years, as the support needed was not forthcoming. The Society lingered on for a number of years as trustees for certain funds, and came to an unfortunate end when these were lost by the failure of one of the leading firms in

$22,000 CLAIM SUCCEEDS

GUNNY BAG CONTRACT BREACH

A claim for $22,760.88 brought by Davie Bong & Co., Ltd., of Queen's Building, against Leung Pak-him, merchant, of 22 Kwai Hsuek Street, was undenied when it came before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, at the Supreme Court this morning.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon, instructed by Mr. J. B. Prentiss, of Messrs. Hastings & Co., appeared for plaintiff and said the claim was for damages for breach of contract. Defendant had five contracts with his clients to take over 450 bales of gunny bags but, though an extension of time was granted, he failed to take delivery of 300 bales. The amount claimed was interest and the difference in price between the contract and the market price, the latter being added from the Calcutta market on February 1, 1934, when the contract was declared broken.

Lee Siu-ting, comrade of the plaintiff firm gave evidence, and judgment and costs were awarded plaintiff.

Two cases of typhoid were reported to the local health authorities on Tuesday.

the Colony. However, the Society was resuscitated later on, as dividends came in from the estate, and it found itself in possession of a sum sufficient to enable it to offer scholarships in the Central School of the time.

Singapore's Debt

I do not propose to go into the further history of these scholarships. Suffice it is to say that they preserve the name of Dr. Morrison to this day in Queen's College, and that they are now five in number, a sum being paid annually in each case being paid which amounts to more than one-half of the capital originally invested.

Raffles College in Singapore owes its foundation to a conversation between Sir Stamford Raffles and Morrison, and with his usual generosity at the outset the sum of $1,500. I have not access to any history of the School of Oriental Languages which forms to-day one of the schools of London University, but Morrison in his 'Life' tells us that Morrison secured the foundation of such an institution during his absence from China on leave.

Sailors' Champion

There is one further interest of his which must not be overlooked. He felt a responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the sailors who came in such large numbers with the Company's fleet at the opening of the trading season each year. He himself conducted services on board the ships off Canton, and it was his representations to London and New York which moved the responsible authorities there to take the problem seriously, appointing special chaplains and commencing that work for seafaring men which is to be found now throughout the Far East.

He realised before leaving England that some equipment for medical missions might be advisable, and took a short medical course at Bart's. We find him in 1820 opening a dispensary in Macao in conjunction with one of the Company's doctors. The next step was taken when another doctor in the employ of the Company added to his regular work the charge of a free hospital which he opened by renting two houses, and which was patronised in 4 years by more than 4,000 patients. There was no doubt of the need, and of the value of the service, but the hospital was short-lived, and the explanation which Wells Williams, the historian of those early years, gives of its demise, is worth quoting. He says it was undoubtedly closed, not because no physician so circumstanced that he could gratuitously attend to such a crowd of patients, few or none of whom could pay him in anything better than thanks, fruit, or fire-crackers, or written words of gratitude. The problem of hospital finance was thus early in evidence.

A Set Purpose

Perhaps I have given the impression that Morrison was a man of multifarious activities. That would be only one part of the truth. He was also a man of utter singleness of purpose. He may have done a score of things, but he did them all with one object in view. He was resolved to make the Bible accessible to the people of China in their own language, against the day he saw coming when they would be free to receive it, and to bring a knowledge of Chinese within the reach of those who would then be able to do what had been denied to him.

But his work was indeed a many-sided one, in spite of the restrictions with which it was hampered at every point. And it is a fact that which makes the selection of a permanent memorial no easy task. As it is, however, the needs of the hospitals in which the London Missionary Society's doctors work are urgent enough to have first claim, probably Morrison never set foot on Hongkong; he knew it at most as an island of no significance which he passed sometimes on his travels. But we have reason to remember him, for he is one of the makers of the community in which we live, and if it is the days to come it is asked in Hongkong 'Who then was Robert Morrison?' let us have something to which we can point at once, to preserve the memory of his achievement, and as our own tribute to his worth.

DAVIS CUP TANGLE: WHAT DO THE NATIONS WANT?

END OF QUALIFYING COMPETITION IN SIGHT

OLD PROBLEM OF CONGESTED ZONE INEVITABLE

BIENNIAL TOURNAMENT MAY YET MATERIALISE

(By "Veritas").

Sponsors of the scheme under which the qualifying competition of the Davis Cup saw the light of day, are faced with the prospects of defeat. A body of opinion, led in the first place by countries such as Austria, Czechoslovakia and Switzerland, has now grown to dimensions sufficient, apparently, to cause the abrupt ending of this new feature of the Davis Cup competition.

The decision reached by a big majority at a private meeting of the Davis Cup committee, needs only the support of a few nations who were not represented, for the qualifying competition, which was introduced as an effort to meet a difficult situation, to become a thing of the past.

This would complete the disillusionment of Britain, who for four years struggled with the problem of conducting the Davis Cup on less complicated lines, and has met with only rebuffs from the countries for which so much work was being carried out.

BRITAIN'S BURDEN.

While practically the whole of the competing nations in the European zone in 1930 and 1931 agreed that the existing method of conducting the tournament badly needed revision, causing at it did congested fixtures and unfortunate clashes with important championship dates, it was left to Britain to produce two concrete schemes.

One was the qualifying competition as it exists to-day, and the alternative a biennial tournament in favour of the latter, and in 1932, when turning down Australia's suggestion for the formation of a South Eastern zone which would include South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, and wrote to the English L.T.A., that "In South Africa the feeling is very strong that the present method of playing for the Davis Cup is too lengthy for an annual event, and that playing it biennially will tend to increase the interest in it, and will be for the ultimate good of lawn tennis throughout the world."

South Africa has clung tenaciously to the idea of biennial competition, and when the smaller European nations began protesting against the impracticability of the qualifying competition, it seemed that the biennial event would be the natural alternative.

FINANCE ENTERS.

But once again finance has intruded itself, and has motivated, not only the abhorrence of the European nations to the qualifying competition, but also to the idea of the Davis Cup being competed for but once every two years.

To the small countries such as Switzerland, Monaco, Austria, Spain, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Roumania etc., whose chances of reaching the more important stages of the competition such as the zone and inter-zone finals are practically nil, the Davis Cup provides merely an excellent means of swelling L.T.A. coffers.

The annual elimination of four countries from the early stages of the European Zone means chances of an attractive draw being lost. Deprived of the opportunity of meeting countries such as Australia, Japan, France, Germany and Czechoslovakia, and confronted with heavy expenditure through participation, the weaker nations feel that entry into the Davis Cup competition is not worth the candle.

On the other hand, the return to status quo means the reintroduction of the problems which beset the competition up to 1933. The countries have turned down two schemes for the elimination of these troubles, and if any alternative to them is to be suggested, it will surely have to come from these participants.

AMERICA'S POSITION.

It is not surprising, of course, to find South Africa's proposal rejected. America would naturally be against it, for America's slogan has always been "The Davis Cup first and last," and any effort to restrict the tournament would be bound to meet with opposition from the founders of the competition.

Nevertheless there is a growing feeling among the countries that a biennial event is the solution to the various problems as demonstrated by the voting at the private meeting. Tenaciously to the idea of biennial this morning, Reuter says that it is understood that twelve voted for, and eleven against, the holding of a biennial contest, but no change in this direction will be made, since two-thirds majority is necessary.

It is further understood that Germany and France opposed the change, although nothing has been announced officially.

STALEMATE.

So that at the moment a stalemate exists, the competitors seem to want neither one nor the other scheme by which it is claimed the problems of conducting the tournament will at least be lessened.

But whatever the possibilities of growing opinion in favour of a biennial competition, it does seem fairly conclusive that after this year, the qualifying competition will be a thing of the past. A noble effort by Britain tampered under foot.

HELEN HICKS REGRETS

CANNOT PLAY IN ENGLAND

New York.

There is one thing that Miss Helen Hicks regrets in connection with her startling decision to become a "businesswoman golfer," and that is that it renders her ineligible to compete in the British Women's Golf Championship again.

So far the British championship has defied all attempts by American women to win it and it is the only major link event for women that Miss Hicks has not won.

The loss of Miss Hicks to American women's golf is a keen one. Her decision came like a bombshell to the thousands of players, and followers of the game, who adore her.

"How about the women's international team?" was one of the first questions asked by leading women golfers. They referred to the team which will oppose the visiting English team at the Chevy Chase Club in Maryland in September. While the team has not yet been named, it was a foregone conclusion that Miss Hicks would be selected, at she was one of the mainstays of the side.

"Why did she not wait until after the international matches?" asked Miss Maureen Orcutt, the Metropolitan champion, who also played on the 1932 team.

Germany's Jewish Athletes Bar To Be Lifted

New York, Aug. 1.

The International Olympic Committee is convinced the Nazi government intends to abide by its promise to select athletes for the 1936 Olympics in Berlin without religious or racial prejudice, Mr. William May Garland, Los Angeles capitalist and a member of the Committee said.

Mr. Garland, who returned from the meeting in Athens aboard the liner Rex, said the unanimous opinion of the delegates was that Germany had fulfilled the assurances of non-discrimination they gave in Vienna last year.

"I understand there will be a number of Jews on the German Olympic team," Mr. Garland said.

Rugby Union And Soccer Pros.

VITAL CHANGE OF LAW

It may be possible in the future for a British Rugby Union player to take part in Association football against Soccer professionals without becoming a professional in Rugby football.

An alteration to one of the laws of the game dealing with this matter was supported at the annual meeting in London last month of the Rugby Union.

The proposed change will have to be sanctioned by the International Board.

Another proposed change deals with the unconverted try. In future it is hoped to distinguish this from a placed goal by a drop kick from the centre instead of a placed kick when play is resumed. It is also proposed that when a player, after leaving the field through injury, desires to return he must seek permission first from the referee.

OLDEST CHAMPION LOSES TITLE

C. A. Picket New Holder Of Welsh Pro. Golf Championship

C. A. Pickett, the twenty-five-year-old professional attached to the Greigian Club, won the Welsh professional golf championship with an aggregate of 296 for seventy-two holes when the event was concluded on the Swansea Bay Club's course recently.

Pickett was successful by a margin of two strokes from Fred Collins (Llandudno), the veteran holder of the title. Pickett, who had been three strokes behind the leader at the end of the first two rounds, returned scores of 72 and 71.

He was one over four on his last round with only two holes to be played, but he secured a fine two at the seventeenth, where he put an iron shot a yard from the pin.

RECORD EQUALLED.

Collins, who was a stroke behind Pickett at the end of three rounds, started his last round with 3, 4, 2, and was four under four after seven holes.

He took six at the eighth, however, and had a similar figure at the sixteenth, where he took three putts.

Pickett, who has been at Greigian for three and a half years, had never previously won an important open competition.

The record for the course held by R. Watts (Pennard), was equalled when D. David (Llandudno) accomplished a round of 70.

NEW SWIMMING POOL

FOR SHANGHAI IN 1935

COUNCIL APPROVES

When the next summer swimming season opens, Shanghai will have a new pool in the Western District, according to an announcement issued by the Shanghai Municipal Council last week.

The Shanghai Times understands that the new pool, construction work on which will start in December or January, in sufficient time for the baths to be ready for opening next summer, will occupy approximately the southern half of Singapore Park, and will be of Olympic dimensions, that is, 50 metres by 25 metres.

The baths will be situated on the corner of Singapore and Kinchow roads, only a block from the new playing fields which are now under construction and will thus be convenient for players after games.

Provision for the construction of the baths will be made in the Works Committee's 1935 Budget. When the preliminary estimates of the Health Department were considered last February, an item of $7,000 to provide for additional dressing room accommodation at the open air swimming pool in Hongkong Park was deleted as the Committee was of the opinion that inasmuch as the congestion at the pool was great it was preferable to provide another pool rather than incur additional expenditure on the existing one.

PROPOSAL ADOPTED.

It was accordingly decided that consideration should be given during the current year to the acquisition of a site for an additional swimming pool, and the Commissioner of Public Works was requested to present a recommendation thereon.

The Commissioner of Public Works submitted to the Works Committee a plan showing a pool at the south end of Cad. Lot 5970, Singapore Park. He stated that it was not proposed to proceed with this provision during the current year, but that if his proposal regarding the site were approved, the construction of the pool would be included in the 1935 estimates. He requested authority for commencement of this work in December or January next in order that the pool would be available for use at the commencement of the 1935 summer season.

After brief discussion, the Committee recommended the Council to adopt this proposal.

It is understood that the baths will be similar to those at Hongkong and will be provided with efficient filtration systems which will ensure a supply of pure water.

SENSATIONAL GOLF

K. LAFFOON WINS BY RECORD MARGIN.

Buffalo, July 26.

The biggest margin of victory in the tournament of the New York Golfers Association has been achieved by K. Laffoon. Playing against Horton Smith in the first round, he won by 12 up and 10 to play.

Horton Smith was the winner this year of the Masters' Tournament at Atlanta, beating by ten strokes the score of Bobby Jones, who returned to competitive golf in this event.

A surprising defeat was sustained by Gene Sarazen. He was eliminated in the second round by Al Watrous, who won by four and three.

Football Coming: Entries For Next Year

SOME NEW TEAMS TO APPEAR

The list of entries for the Football League next winter gives twelve teams in the Senior Division of the League, ten in the Second Division and eleven in the Third Division.

South China has entered two teams in the Senior Division, and one each in the other two Divisions. A new entrant this year is the Railway Recreation Club, which has entered a team in the Third Division. The Eastern Athletic Association has also entered a team in the Second Division. Last year they did not compete, although they paid their affiliation fee. They competed the previous two years.

The following are the entries:
First Division.—Royal Artillery, South China (two teams), East Lancashire Regiment, St. Joseph's, Kowloon Football Club, Club de Recreo, Hongkong Football Club, Royal Navy, Lincoln, Police and Chinese Athletic.

MALAY PROFESSIONALS' PETITION

UNANIMOUS RECOMMENDATION BY S.A.F.A. COUNCIL

At a recent meeting of the Council of the Singapore Amateur Football Association, consideration was given to a letter signed by 15 of the Malay footballers who were concerned in the charges of professionalism, which were the subject of inquiry in March last, asking for early consideration of an application for reinstatement as amateurs.

The letter was very sympathetically received and on the motion of Mr. E. E. Colman (M.F.A.), seconded by Dr. J. S. Webster, it was agreed to recommend to the Football Association of Malaya that permission be granted unplayed at the date of their reinstatement. This decision was taken to avoid any possible hardship on teams which might be in the running for honours but still have to meet the Malays. Those clubs who have already concluded their fixtures with the Malays, playing against the weakened side, would, but for this condition, be placed at a pronounced advantage over clubs which might be called upon to meet the Malay team at full strength.

A further proposal was put forward and is under consideration that to record appreciation of the correct and sportsman-like attitude of those players, efforts should be made to arrange a special game to mark their return to local amateur football, the sides to be one made up of the players who are to be reinstated and the other selected from the remainder of Singapore.

The recommendation for reinstatement will be considered by the Football Association of Malaya at Kuala Lumpur on Saturday, Aug. 4.

The 15 players are: Salleh bin Yusoff, Mahmood bin Jalil, Mat Noor bin Kassim, Sarip bin Ali, Kassim bin Jalil, Dollah bin Ahmad, Yusoff bin Ahmad, Abdul Aziz bin Haji Jaffar, Said bin Siddik, Said bin Yusoff, Zarkasi bin Haji Ibrahim, Noordin bin Ali, Omar bin Tahir, Amin bin Keehl and Ismail bin Rasol.

THE HORSE THAT WAS A "CERT"

Lamed While Leading Half Mile From Post

The most surprising upset of the racing season occurred in the Champney Plate at Gatwick last month.

There were three runners—The Sage, who had won all his three races in effortless style, and two moderate platers, Chelsea Reach and Tarquinus. On form, The Sage was a certainty. He started at 100-9 on.

Half a mile from the finish The Sage was leading in front with the other two being hard-riden to get on terms with him.

Then there was a gasp from the crowd, and I picked up my glasses to see The Sage last, hobbling on three legs.

He had broken a fetlock in his hind leg, and was so badly injured that his jockey, R. Dick, immediately dismounted. The horse had to be brought back in a float. Walter Nightingall, who trains The Sage, had the horse brought back to his Epsom quarters in the hope of saving him, but his injuries proved to be too serious and the horse was later destroyed.

World Tennis Stars For Australia

The world's tennis champions will be seen in action in Melbourne during the Centenary Australian Championships from January 3 to 12, 1935.

The national tennis associations of Great Britain, United States of America, Japan, South Africa and New Zealand have already accepted the invitation of the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia to send their two best available players, while France has also received a similar invitation.

Germany, Spain, Italy and Czechoslovakia have been invited to send one representative each, and it is confidently anticipated that they will accept Australian Championships in Melbourne, the visiting players will be seen in action in exhibition matches in the other capital cities and in the New South Wales championships.

HUGE SPORTS STADIUM

NEW SHANGHAI PROJECT

BIGGEST EVER IN FAR EAST

Plans has been announced for the giant Greater Shanghai Stadium Group which is to be built in the Municipal Park at the Civic Centre at a cost of $1,000,000.

The contract signed calls for completion of the work by May next year in order that the ground may be ready for the National Athletic meeting to be held in July.

Containing seating accommodation for 40,000, the main stadium will include a 500 metres track, two 200 metres tracks, a football field, three tennis courts and three basketball courts, while sleeping accommodation for 3,000 athletes will also be provided.

VAST GYMNASIUM.

A vast gymnasium with a floor area 20 metres by 40 metres and an arched ceiling 20 metres high will contain facilities for indoor tennis, basketball, volleyball and other games and will be specially heated. The swimming pool will be 20 metres by 60 metres and will be able to seat 4,500 spectators. The depths will range from 4 feet 6 inches to 11 feet.

Space has been left for the future addition of three lawn tennis courts with seating accommodation for 4,000, with a club house close by. A standard-sized baseball ground, also among additions planned, and seating 4,000 this will also have club quarters.

BIGGER THAN MANILA.

The area covered by the whole group of buildings will be approximately 270 mow and the work will be in the hands of Messrs. Chen Tai, while Dayu Doon has been appointed Architect.

Even bigger than the grounds, built at Manila for the Far Eastern Olympic Games, the Greater Shanghai Stadium will be the largest in the Orient, and will be most up-to-date in design and facilities.

The cost of the work has been appropriated from the three and a half million dollar loan floated recently by the Greater Shanghai Municipal Council.

THE RAILWAY

CANTON COMMENT ON AGREEMENT

The draft of the working agreement of the Canton-Kowloon Railway through service is reported to have been signed by delegates of the British and Chinese sections. Beyond the fact 72% of the receipts is to go to the Chinese side and 28% to the British, nothing else has been revealed, says the Canton Gazette. As is well known the British section operates 21 miles of the entire line, and the Chinese, 89 miles. If computing on the mileage basis, the distribution of takings should be 80% and 20% respectively. This was what the Chinese delegates at first set out to secure. The British have all along maintained that receipts distribution should not be based on the number of miles of line operated by each side, as, due to the hilly and rocky nature of the land on their side, it has cost more to build their length of rail than the average 21 miles in the Chinese section. Whatever may have been the considerations the fact lies in the acceptance by both sections of the 72:28 ratio. While this is 7% below the figures sought by the Chinese, still an agreement has been amicably reached. It is understood that a working basis has also been arrived at. It is to be hoped that a progressive policy has been worked out and with a clear and friendly understanding reached, that the greatest energy and the fullest co-operation will be shown by the two managements.

Safety Factor.

With the Canton-Kowloon Railway as well as with any other passenger transport service, the main factor for attracting patronage is safety. There is no question of the presence of this on the British section, as trains run there nightly without molestation by lawless elements. If a night through service is desired it may be at any time introduced on their side with confidence. We would like to see the same condition obtaining in the Chinese section. The next factor is speed. Both sides must maintain their line in such a condition so that an increase in speed may any day be effected without danger and discomfort to passengers which would arise with an ill-maintained road.

Last of all comes the factor of convenience. The need of a noon through service has long been keenly felt especially for week ends. It is gratifying to learn that a daily midday express will be operated from October. The time of departure of the morning and afternoon expresses may with advantage be altered to earlier and later respectively.

There are other minor details towards popularizing the line and it is details, as we know, that give the finishing touch to everything. The compartments could be cleaned, the attendants more courteous to passengers and attentive to duty, and the guards more alert. An alarm system is necessary in case of lawlessness, accident, serious illness, etc. Someone in each train should have first aid training and a medicine chest should be kept. An inspector who would see to the safety and comfort of passengers could well be kept. Notices should be posted inviting complaints and at the same time suggestions for the elimination of those things which form the subject of the complaints.

Increased Revenue.

With the elements of safety, speed, comfort and convenience present and efforts made to please patrons there is good reason to expect an increase in receipts resulting in the making up for the 7% decrease on the British side with the new agreement and the 7% shortage from the original aim on the Chinese section. As often stated in these columns before, although the Canton-Kowloon Railway is Government operated and in times of military emergency is calculated to be of great strategic value, primarily it is intended as a business venture, hence dependent on the goodwill of the public for its prosperity. It will never do for the two managements to disregard their well being and wishes. It should be run just as any other business enterprise; and all the principles that go towards the making of a successful business, needless to say, should be just as carefully observed. Once we knew a cinema proprietor who would choose films not to please his public but himself and generally humoured himself in the conducting of his business. It was not long before he had to sell out. He attributed his failure to bad luck, whereas really it was bad management or unsound policy. His successor reversed his policy and to-day that theatre is one of the most profitable concerns of his city.

ARSON & SABOTAGE

RUSSIAN ENGINEERS TO BE SHOT

Moscow, Aug. 1.

Five Russian engineers were sentenced to be shot and six others to terms of imprisonment, following their trial on charges of arson and sabotage.

It was alleged that the accused set fire to a large factory in the Ural district, housing extensive machine-making plant.

The motive behind the crime, it was alleged at the trial, was to secure orders for a foreign firm. A foreign expert employed at the factory was stated to have issued the instructions.—Reuter.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

When you are fortunate to receive a favourable opening, why try for a play later in the game just to see if you are lucky? In to-day's game, declarer can hope to find the ace of diamonds, or the king of hearts, in the East hand. But he must still play the hand to provide for both being wrong.

In other words, if West holds both the ace of diamonds and the king of hearts, the declarer should play the hand so that he can still make his contract. That isn't difficult, but it proves that it pays to establish that side suit before monkeying around with a suit in which the opponents are strong.

After South opened the bidding with one heart, and West bid two clubs, North's bid of two spades is much stronger than if the bidding had gone heart, pass, one spade. The bid of one spade over one heart would, of course, be forcing.

The Play

If East had opened the jack of diamonds, the contract of four spades could have been defeated. However, in response to his partner's club bid, East opened the six of clubs, the eight was played from dummy, West played the ten, and declarer won with the ace.

He then cashed the king and queen of spades, which picked up the outstanding trump. His next play was the ten of hearts and the queen was finessed from dummy, West winning with the king.

West could cash his king of clubs, but then he was helpless. Of course, he could cash the ace of diamonds and hold the contract to four. But if West led anything but the ace of diamonds, North would make the rest of the tricks.

For example, if a heart were returned, East's nine spot would force dummy to win with the ace. Then a small heart would be returned and ruffed by the declarer with the three of spades. This would establish two good hearts in dummy.

Now all declarer had to do was to lead a small club, ruff with the ten of spades in dummy, lead the two good hearts, and discard the two losing diamonds.

Now a diamond was ruffed with the five of spades, the last club was ruffed with the ace of spades, and the king of diamonds was Minneapolis, Aug. 1.

Governor Olson took drastic action against the striking lorry drivers here to-day.

Acting on his instructions a large force of National Guardsmen, supported by machine guns, and carrying fixed bayonets, raided the lorrymen's headquarters shortly before the pickets were assembled to receive their illegal instructions.

There was fighting and a number of arrests were made, but the situation was never dangerous. Renter.

ruffed with the eight of spades, giving the declarer five odd.

Today's Contract Problem
West is the declarer at two hearts doubled. Yes, it does look like an odd contract, but it's the result of a psychic bid. Now can you prevent West from making even a heart trick?

FUNERAL OF MR. SOUZA

MANY PORTUGUESE PAY TRIBUTE

The loss of a well known and popular resident in the death on Tuesday of Mr. Francisco Xavier Souza, was mourned by a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral yesterday at the Roman Catholic Cemetery, Happy Valley.

Deceased was 63 years of age and had spent practically all his life in the Colony, being for a great period employed by Humphrey's Estate Co.

For nearly two years, however, illness had kept him indoors.

A widow, three sons and four daughters are left.

Father Rossi conducted the last rites, the chief mourners being Messrs. S. L. and R. Souza, (sons) and Mrs. Tavares, and Misses. H. L. and N. Souza (daughters).

Deceased's brothers were present with a large number of the Portuguese community and others, among them being: Messrs. A. Gosano, A. M. Pereira, A. C. Goldenberg, H. H. Xavier, J. F. Tavares, A. N. Tavares, C. Pinto, A. Delgado, R. M. Omar, E. Rocha, H. Pomoroy, Perez, F. P. Laurel, D. Baptista and A. E. Tavares.

In addition to the family wreaths, floral tributes were sent by: The Compradore Department, Netherlandsche Indische Handelsbank; Mr. and Mrs. E. D. P. Hyndman; Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Tavares and family; A. M. da Silva and A. A. da Silva; Ela, Jose, Rene, J. R. Castilho, and family; Shedick & Co.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Roberto; A. C. Johnston; Portuguese Staff of Reiss Massey & Co.; A. A short and impressive service was held, conducted by Bishop Hall, assisted by the Rev. E. G. Powell, the Rev. C. D. Cousins and Mr. Wat Lok-hing, and the Lesson, taken from the Third Book of Wisdom, by Mr. Herbert Phillips, after which the party proceeded to the graves for the burial, singing and blessing by the Bishop.

Mr. Herbert Phillips laid a floral tribute on behalf of the British Community in South China; Dr. Gibson and Mr. S. V. Boxer on behalf of the Directors and Missionaries of the London Missionary Society; the Rev. E. G. Powell on behalf of the Robert Morrison Centenary Committee; Professor L. Forster on behalf of the Tyneside Community in Hongkong; the Rev. Paul S. F. T'so and Yimson Hain-tao on behalf of the Chinese Y.M.C.A., Hongkong. A wreath was also laid by Mr. F. J. Gellion.

The graves of John Morrison, the son, Mary Morrison, the wife, and of Dr. Morrison himself were then blessed by the Bishop, after which the party returned to the Chuen Chow and arrived in Hongkong just after 7 o'clock.

MORRISON CENTENARY PILGRIMAGE FROM HONGKONG

On the hundredth anniversary of the death of Dr. Robert Morrison, the pioneer English missionary to the Chinese, it was fitting that a visit should be made to his humble tomb, tucked away in a quiet corner of the old Protestant Cemetery at Macao. Such a visit was paid yesterday by a party of pilgrims from Hongkong who paid homage to his memory with a simple service in the little church and laid wreaths on his grave. The pilgrimage was led by the Rev. Ronald Owen Hall, Bishop of Victoria.

The party which made the journey to Macao from Hongkong were the Rt. Rev. R. O. Hall, Bishop of Victoria, the Hon. Sir William Shenton and the Rev. E. G. Powell, vice-Chairman of the Centenary Celebration Committee, the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen, Professor and Mrs. L. Forster, Mrs. E. G. Powell, the Rev. Rudland Showell (Lingnan University, Canton), the Rev. John Forster (Union Theological Society, Canton), Dr. B. M. Gibson (London Missionary Society), the Rev. A. K. Belton, the Rev. Paul S. F. T'so (St. Paul's Church, Hongkong), Mr. Yimson Hain-tao (General Secretary, Chinese Y.M.C.A., Hongkong), Mr. K. E. Wang (General Secretary of the Shanghai Civic Association), the Rev. C. D. Cousins (London Missionary Society), Mr. S. V. Boxer, Mr. Henry Graye, Miss B. M. Pope, Mr. Wat Lok-hing, Miss W. I. Griffin and Miss Elliott.

They left by the s.s. Chuen Chow at 8 a.m. and arrived in Macao shortly after 11 a.m. where they were met by Mr. Herbert Phillips, British Consul-General of Canton and Macao, and Mr. F. J. Gellion.

Impressive Service.

PRESIDENT HINDENBURG SINKS INTO COMA

NOT LIKELY TO LIVE THE DAY

RELATIVES CALLED TO BEDSIDE

EARLY MORNING BULLETIN

Berlin, Aug. 2. It is understood that the doctors at Neudeck Castle have abandoned hope of saving President Hindenburg, who is in extremis and may die at any moment.

The official admission that President Hindenburg is dying has naturally caused a rumour that Germany's aged leader is already dead.

The rumour has been strengthened by the fact that the Cabinet is meeting almost immediately. The flag over Neudeck Castle is still flying at full mast, however, and there seems no reason to believe that the Government would delay the announcement of Hindenburg's death.

HITLER'S LONG TALK.

It is learned that Herr Hitler and President Hindenburg had quite a long talk yesterday morning.

There were no witnesses whatsoever of the interview, which lasted for an hour, but there is no doubt that the principal topic of discussion was the question of Hindenburg's successor.

A report is now current that Baron von Neurath, the present Foreign Minister, will be the Hitler Government's nominee.

SUDDEN RELAPSE.

It is learned that President Hindenburg had a sudden and severe relapse last evening. Before it occurred, he seemed reasonably well, speaking to his children and grand-children. He even discussed the harvest prospects.

A further report says that he also sent a message of loyalty to the ex-Kaiser.—Reuter.

A MATTER OF TIME.

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 11:50 a.m.)

Berlin, Aug. 2. President Hindenburg's doctors decline to predict how long he may live. They say it entirely depends upon the strength of the heart, which has been decreasing. He may die at any time, or he may linger on for a day or two.—United Press.

DEEP UNCONSCIOUSNESS.

Berlin, Aug. 2. A bulletin issued early this morning states that Hindenburg has sunk into deep unconsciousness and his weakness is increasing.—Reuter.

INCREASING WEAKNESS.

(Special to "Telegraph")
(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 2:17 p.m.)

Neudeck, Aug. 2. A bulletin issued from Neudeck Castle at 4:44 a.m. stated:

"Conditions of increasing general weakness and deep stupor have set in on the part of the Herr Reichspräsident."

It is signed by Dr. Sauerbrück and four other physicians.—United Press.

WAR ANNIVERSARY.

It is considered unlikely that President Hindenburg will survive to-day, the twentieth anniversary of the outbreak of the Great War. All four doctors have abandoned hope.

The President's son, daughter-in-law and two daughters and their husbands, were called to

U.S. NAVAL REDUCTION FEELER

RESPONSE TO OKADA

5-5-3 RATIO MUST BE PRESERVED

MR. SWANSON AS SPONSOR

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 11:16 a.m.)

Washington, Aug. 1. Mr. Claude Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, said he was prepared to sponsor a general naval armaments reduction of twenty per cent. by the great sea-powers, while definitely opposed to abandonment of the 5-5-3 ratio.

Apparently replying to the speech of Admiral Okada, Japan's new Premier, Mr. Swanson said: "I believe that if we abandon the ratios there could be no predicting where we should go. I am prepared for a twenty per cent. reduction in all categories of ships."

PERSONAL VIEW.

He emphasized, however, that this was a personal opinion and did not in any way necessarily represent the attitude the Administration would take at the naval conference.

The President, he said, would determine the Government's policy there.

"But it is my conviction that under no circumstances should we consent to a change in the ratio."

ITALY AND FRANCE TOO.

Mr. Swanson also stressed that he would not advocate a twenty per cent. reduction in all warship categories unless all the London signatories (Italy and France included) are prepared to participate.

He reiterated advocacy of a United States Navy second to none and said that if reductions were agreed upon he would suggest the abandonment and breaking-up of over-age ships and refraining from building new ones. In 1936, he pointed out, the United States would have three over-age battleships. At present, she has only one.

A FEELER.

He also indicated that the proposed reduction in warship strengths might be offered to the 1936 conference as a feeler.

And, he said, if there are any indications that other nations are ready to go further, "I might even sponsor a reduction of from twenty-five to thirty per cent."

Commenting on the Baldwin Rhineland Air Frontier declaration, Mr. Swanson said: "Our frontiers extend to all our territory. We have no aggressive policy, but we are determined to defend ourselves.—United Press.

SERIOUS HAPPENINGS POSSIBLE

"WAR TO END WAR" DECLARED

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 12:51 p.m.)

New Orleans, Aug. 1. The political feud in New Orleans is continuing and there are fears of serious developments, although the people generally are taking no interest.

The militia who seized the office of the Registrar of Voters on Monday on the orders of the Governor are still in occupation.

Mayor Walmesley has proclaimed a "war to end war" and has sworn in five hundred citizens as special constables.

The "specials" have been armed to the teeth with shot guns, a variety of pistols and squirrel guns.

Business men and the public generally have ignored the manoeuvres of the politicians and commerce is practically normal.—United Press.

MA CHUNG-YING FLEES TO RUSSIA

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 1:16 a.m.)

Peking, Aug. 2. With the surrender and disbandment of the remnants of the rebel troops of Ho Tseng, the independence movement in South Sinkiang has been completely suppressed, states a Tihua telegram.

Sheng Shih-tsai, the Director of Frontier Defence in Sinkiang, has reinforced the garrison at Hami from the headquarters of Ma Chung-ying, the Moslem leader, who has fled to Russia.

Preparations are reported to be under way for the early restoration of communications between Sinkiang and China.—Reuter.

DR. RINTELIN'S AMBITIONS TO BE NAZI CHANCELLOR IN AUSTRIA

STARTLING NAZI DOCUMENT

INCRIMINATING LIST OF NAMES

VIENNA, AUGUST 2.

BELIEF THAT DR. ANTON RINTELIN HOLDS THE CLUES TO ALL THE RAMIFICATIONS OF THE NAZI INSURRECTIONARY PLOT IN AUSTRIA WAS STARTLINGLY CONFIRMED YESTERDAY BY THE DISCOVERY OF A REMARKABLE DOCUMENT WHICH PURPORTS TO GIVE A LIST OF THE PROPOSED APPOINTMENTS TO CABINET RANK HAD THE NAZI COUP D'ETAT SUCCEEDED.

It is alleged that the list of names, together with the posts the individuals mentioned were to occupy, was found after an extensive search of Dr. Rintelin's Vienna residence.

The list shows that Dr. Rintelin was to be the new Chancellor and that Theodore Habicht, Hitler's notorious Inspector for Austria, was to return to Vienna in the role of conquering hero to occupy the office of Vice-Chancellor.

MANY LEADERS QUAKING IN THEIR SHOES

These names have occasioned no surprise but some of the others have caused astonishment and naturally aroused considerable speculation about men not mentioned and who might also be involved.

The name of Herr Winkler, the former Vice-Chancellor and collaborator of Dr. Dollfuss, is, for instance, included. He would have become Minister of Agriculture.

DR. APOLD ARRESTED.

Dr. Apold, the general director of the Alpine Montane Steel Works, is now under arrest. He was to have been Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Field-Marshal Berdolf and General Wagner also appear in the alleged incriminating document.

AUTHENTIC DOCUMENT?

Authenticity seems to be imparted to the document in the circumstance that while Dr. Rintelin apparently took no active part in the attempted Nazi coup, he was announced as the new Chancellor from the broadcasting station, in the premature statement proclaiming the downfall of the Dollfuss Cabinet.

Moreover, his sympathy with the Nazi movement is well known. He resigned Cabinet rank in June 1933 because of his view that the Government should compromise with the Nazis.

RINTELIN'S THREAT.

He has always been one of Austria's strong men and was known for years as the "Uncrowned King of Styria," hot-bed of Nazi intrigue. He was the natural man for the Nazis to turn to in search of a popular leader.

He now threatens to make a clean breast of all he knows in connection with the developments of the last fortnight, and there is reason to believe that there are a large number of highly-placed Austrians who are shivering in their shoes lest he should carry out his threat.

RAPIDLY RECOVERING.

It is officially admitted that Dr. Rintelin is now rapidly recovering from the bullet wound which he inflicted upon himself last week in an attempt to commit suicide and that many precautionary measures have been taken already as the result of information which he has given to the authorities.—Reuter.

FRAU DOLLFUSS TO SEE POPE

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received August 2, 2:16 a.m.)

Riccione, Aug. 1. Frau Dollfuss's plans for the future are very uncertain, but it is learned that she is leaving for Rome soon to see the Pope, accompanied by her two children.

A poignant story is related concerning little Eva's discovery of her father's death.

It is stated that the children learned that Dr. Dollfuss was dead as a result of the girl's intuition.

When her mother telephoned to Riccione from Vienna, Eva was called to the instrument and the first thing she asked was: "Are you coming back with daddy?"

A silence followed, then a sound of a sob.

Eva had burst into tears and despite assurances that her father would return, she repeated again and again, "Daddy will never come back."—Reuter Special.

MARRIES MAN

FAILED TO ATTRACT

MEN are attracted by beautiful lips, but only by lips that have the natural color of radiant health. No man wants to marry a woman who looks as if she used paint. The way to give your lips the youthful glow that men admire, without risking that painted look, is Tangee Lipstick.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

Tangee is not paint. Instead it changes color on your lips. In the stick Tangee looks orange but put it on it takes on the shade of rose most becoming to you. Tangee becomes a very part of you, instead of a greasy coating, hence it longer-lasting than ordinary "paint" lipsticks. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base, so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. No drying, cracking or chapping when you use Tangee. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look—make the face seem older.

PAINTED—Don't risk that painted look. It's coarsening and men don't like it.

TANGE—Intensifies natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that painted look.

NEW—Tangee Face Powder gives a soft underglow, makes the skin look younger. Contains the new color-change principle of Tangee Lipstick. Blends with your complexion, prevents powdery, mask-like effect.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

When "Stand Up and Cheer!", Fox Film's new musical extravaganza, comes to the King's Theatre on Sunday, it will introduce no fewer than five songs that have already established themselves as song-hits wherever they have been heard. Lew Brown, associate producer with Winfield Sheehan, of this most elaborate production, is the author of the songs. In collaboration with Jay Gorney. The songs, destined as the dance tunes of the world for 1934, are "Our Last Night Together", "Baby Take a Bow", "Let's Laughing", "Broadway's Gonna Hill Billy", "She's Way Up There" and "Out of the Red". They are sung, in various teaming arrangements, by John Boles, James Dunn, Evelyn Froos, the sensational four-year-old "find" Shirley Temple, Nick Foran, "Aunt Jeanna", and Earl Dancer's famous chorus. In each of them there is an ensemble composed of the most beautiful girls the screen has ever placed on view. Although he does not sing any songs, Warner Baxter is the leading role in the picture. It was directed by Hamilton MacFadden from an original idea by Will Rogers and Philip Klein.

"Let's Fall in Love"

When a Hollywood producer strikes a responsive note among movie audiences with a new theme, it requires little foresight to predict a cycle of similar type films. Witness "Public Enemy" several years ago, or more recently, "Forty-Second Street". Practically every major studio has released a musical production to date, notably, "Too Much Harmony", "Moonlight and Pretzels", "College Humour", "Gold Diggers of Broadway" and "Roman Scandals". In "Let's Fall in Love", the musical romance featuring Ann Southern and Edmund Lowe, showing to-day at the King's Theatre, the Columbia Studios have made the first important departure from the all-familiar backstage plot and have produced instead a dramatic musical of Hollywood studio life. A salient departure of "Let's Fall in Love" from the average musical is the absence of chorus and those unneeded girl routines which have become so common in backstage film musicals. Since there was no logical call for chorines in this story, the director refused to drag them in by the heels merely to conform to the accepted standard. The book of this musical of the studios is by Herbert Fields who created such notable New York successes as "Hit the Deck", "Fifty Million Frenchmen", "Pardon My English", "Present Arms", "The Connelly Yunkies" and many others. "Let's Fall in Love" does feature several songs and a lively musical score by Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler, but they are deftly and logically incorporated in the plot. These youthful composers are the New York song writers from the Harlem Cotton Club, who created "Stormy Weather", "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues", "Minnie the Mochoer", and many other popular hits of the day. Ann Southern is the well-known New York musical comedy star of "Smiles", "Everybody's Welcome" and "Of Thee I Sing". Edmund Lowe plays the director who falls in love with her, and Gregory Ratoff is the motion picture producer. Others in the distinguished cast are Miriam Jordan, Arthur Jarrett and Greta Meyer.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Headwork Counts in Makeup

EXPERIMENT TO GET COIFFURE FOR YOUR TYPE

By Alicia Hart

One of the reasons that coiffure experts and noteworthy cosmeticians are so successful in pleasing their customers is that they dare to experiment a bit now and then and, once they've proved the value of the experiment, have sense enough to leave well enough alone. The wise woman, particularly one who can't go to beauty shops often, should make an unprejudiced checkup on her personal appearance occasionally and then do a bit of experimenting herself.

One popular stage star confesses that she went along for years trying unsuccessfully to get a part in a play and that it was not until she tried a new hair dress and some rather exotic makeup that she was able to make any sort of impression on the producers.

Then there is the famous New York coiffure expert who says that any woman who has fair features and passable hair can look really lovely if she'll just use the correct makeup and wear her hair in a becoming fashion. The two pictures (shown here) illustrate his point.

On the right is a young woman who wears her hair in tight waves—probably because it's hard to break the habit—and pulls the dips

over her cheeks and forehead, breaking an otherwise smooth and flattering profile line. To make matters worse, she puts her rouge on in two small spots on the cheeks, neglecting to blend the edges, and smears lipstick on white skin as well as lips. She completes the bad picture by frowning.

The large picture is of the same young woman after a famous cosmetician showed her how to make up correctly and how to do her hair a new way. As you can see, her rouge is carefully blended, lipstick follows the contour of her lips and her hair is softly waved backward, allowing her lovely forehead to show. She's smiling now—and no wonder!

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Rinse Off Deodorants

By Alicia Hart

Deodorants have ringside seats in the daintiness game. An efficacious one is as necessary to your charm and beauty as clean clothes and correct cosmetics. There can be no hard and fast rule for its use—some need to use a deodorant daily and others only once or twice a week—but the women who never need one at all are few and far between.

If the skin under your arms is very sensitive, you'll probably choose a mild deodorant. If not, the double-strength varieties are better for you since they have to be used less frequently. If, for some reason or other, you do not wish to check perspiration but prefer to use some preparation that takes the odour out of it, there are creams and lotions that do just that. You might get sample bottles and jars of several types and try each one before you buy a large amount.

Remember that a deodorant should be used after you have bathed, allowed to dry and then rinsed off before you put on either nightgown or street clothes. Never use one immediately after shaving or applying a depilatory. It may be that a strong deodorant will make your skin itch and feel uncomfortable. If that happens, dust under the arms with powder or rub on a bit of your nourishing cream.

Exercises to Keep Hands Supple

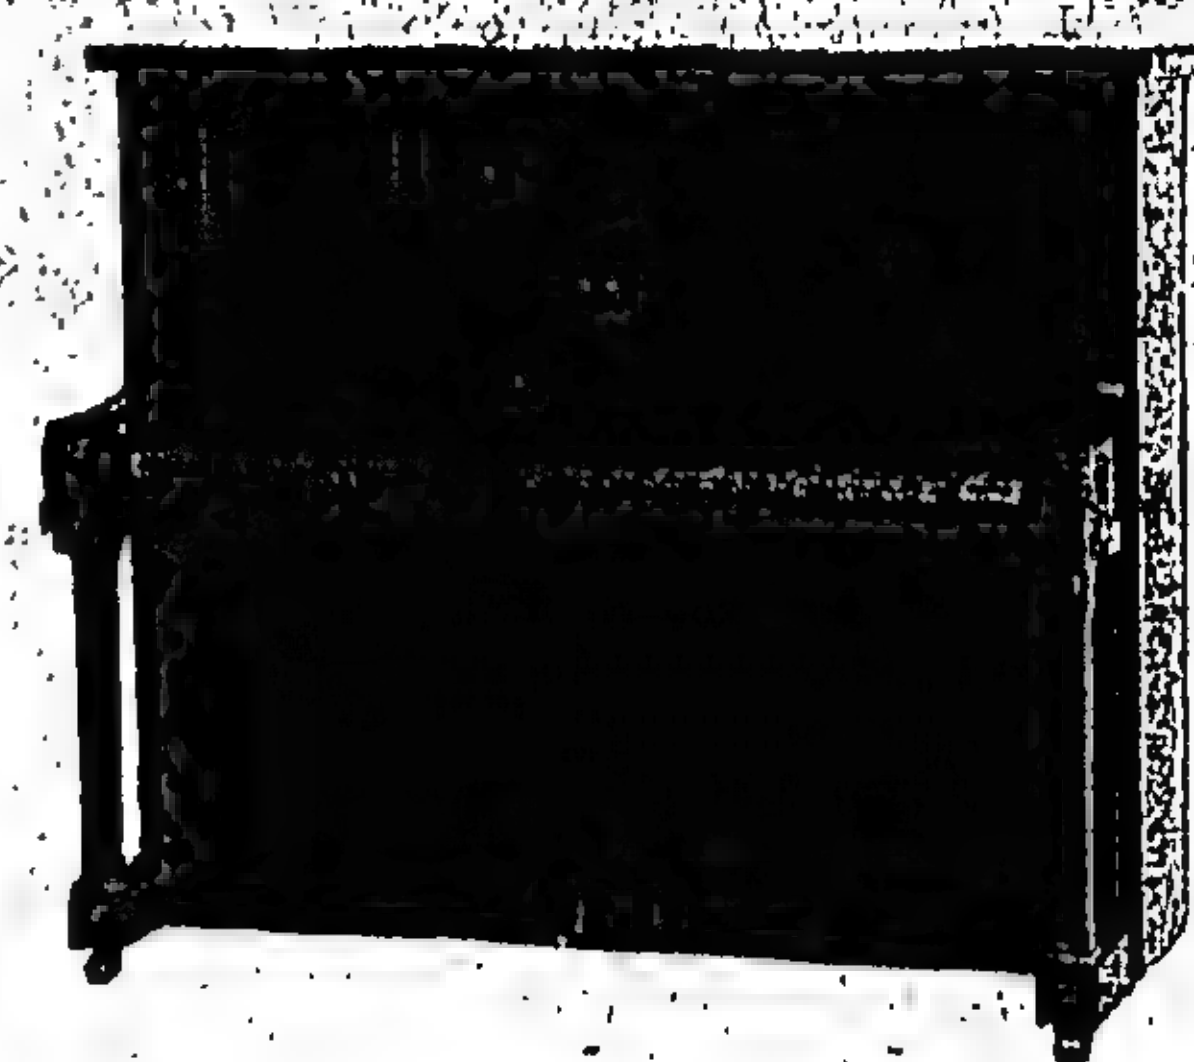

By Alicia Hart

Beauty, as far as hands and wrists are concerned, is much more than skin deep. No matter how white, smooth and well-kept looking your hands may be, they will be twice as lovely if they are graceful and supple.

Plan to devote a few minutes each day to exercises that will loosen tense muscles and stiff joints in your hands and wrists. Most exercises of this type are simple and can be done while seated. Here are some that you might try:

Relax arms, hands and wrists and then imagine that you're trying to shake water from your finger tips. Let the fingers snap together with each downward shake, keeping shoulders and arms perfectly relaxed so that they, as well as wrists and fingers, are exercised. Repeat at least 10 times and then go on to the next step.

Make believe that you're pulling taffy. Stretch the arms outward, closing and opening the hands as you do it. Then spread the fingers wide apart several times. Now, raising the arms above the head, wave them backward and forward, keeping the wrists and fingers relaxed.

SOPHIE KERR'S LATEST SUCCESS IN ROMANTIC PROBLEM FICTION "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

JANE TERRY comes to New York determined to show her home town and especially Amy Jackson that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until Howard Jackson broke the engagement. Jane forced on him and married Amy. Unable to bear the sight of Amy's happiness, Jane obtains a job in a New York real estate office.

Jane is clever and soon is making an excellent salary. She has an affair with ROBERT THORPE, who is married. Later the time of him and when he offers to bear the expense of their child she dismisses him contemptuously.

In her desperate plight Jane turns to Amy for help. Howard is leaving Germany and Amy comes to New York. She stays until the baby is born and then, horrified because Jane insists on giving her daughter away, agreed to take it with the understanding that Jane never shall reclaim the child.

CHAPTER XVIII

Now that she had taken the child for her own Amy was in a turmoil of doubt. What would Howard say when he came back and found that she had done this without consulting him? What would her father and mother think? And what an exacting, overwhelming responsibility she had assumed! Taking proper care of an infant is not, she discovered at once, a mere matter of feminine instinct, but an expert and complicated craft, with a considerable dash of science.

Miss McNeil instructed, disapprovingly, on bathing, clothing, routine. Doctor Lacey also instructed, without enthusiasm, on formulas of feeding, mixtures, and temperatures. Amy tried to learn everything at once, for she wanted to get away, to go home, to be out of sight and sound of Jane, because the revulsion that had come to her at Jane's light-hearted riddling herself of the child persisted, increased. She hid it as far as she could, but it was there and affected their relation. They were drawing away from each other. Jane was stronger each day and her only concern was to put this whole sorry business behind her and get back to work. Her satisfaction was almost flippant. She couldn't, she said very often, have had a better break.

But she knew how Amy felt. She knew that Amy could not gloss over or condone what she had done. It amused Jane a little that Amy shouldn't be shocked at her having the child, only at her giving it away. It annoyed her, too. She did not fancy Amy's sitting in judgment on her and there were moments when she considered taking the child away from Amy and sending it to be adopted as she had planned in the first place.

This she did not quite dare to do. She was, though she would not have owned it even to herself, afraid of Amy's anger and contempt, and so long as they were hidden, she could pretend they did not exist and that everything was right between them.

The honesty that she had used to Amy before the child was born disappeared. Neither could Amy be honest. So they talked together as little as possible. Amy concerned herself with the child and tried to still her great anxiety for Howard's safety, for no word had come from him.

The reports of Americans murdered in Europe and their trials and tribulations were now coming through and added to her fears. She planned to go back to Marburg at the first moment Doctor Lacey said a child so very young might safely travel. The apartment was crowded and uncomfortable and Emma sulked about the extra work. It would be a relief to everyone when Amy could go.

When that day finally did arrive there was so much to do to get ready, everything was confused and hurried, that there was no chance for any private conversation between the two friends. Jane and Miss McNeil both went with Amy to the train, established her and the child in a drawing-room and then the nurse said goodbye and hurried off. Amy and Jane were left in the tight stuffy little place.

"I suppose I ought to be very grateful," Jane began. In the dim light she looked blooming and carefree. Her colour had come back. She had gone out to the hairdresser while Amy was packing. She had put on a smart frock and hat.

Amy glanced up from arranging pillows carefully about the child and, seeing Jane's smile, her constraint dropped and her despondency leaped out. "You needn't be grateful. All you need to do is to remember that this child is mine. And if you ever try to claim her I'll tell the whole story."

Jane struck back, subtly, sweetly, but with the sharpest blow she could deal. "I'm glad to give the child to you, Amy, since you have none of your own—if you hadn't taken Howard Jackson away from me this would have been his child, remember. I shan't claim her."

"Howard didn't want you," said Amy, "and you know it. I don't suppose he'll want this child of yours either—that's one reason why you must never claim her—"

Jane was pale now, but she recovered her sense. "Don't let's quarrel again. It's so foolish to quarrel—"

"I'm not quarrelling with you, but I won't stand your lies. You want always to twist things so you're not to blame. Well, this can't be twisted. I've always loved you, Jane, no matter what you did, but this is—I don't know—it's as if you—you had no—no integrity in your soul."

"Integrity in my soul! That's only a fancy phrase! It doesn't mean anything. Why don't you look at the whole thing sensibly as I've asked you to before. What on earth would I do with a baby?" "This isn't a baby, it's your baby, or it was—now it's mine. If we talked for a thousand years we'd never agree. Stay out of my life, Jane—I don't want you there any more. Goodbye." She did not offer to shake hands, she did not want to touch or come near Jane.

Jane waited a second. "Goodbye," she said at last, and went out. Through the window Amy could see her walking quickly along the platform, head up, slight and young and buoyant.

"I hope I never see her again," thought Amy. "I wouldn't have believed—no, I wouldn't have believed—she didn't even look at the baby, or say a word about her or to her." She was trembling, shaken by her rare passionate anger. She could not remember when she had ever been so angry before. The porter came and one part of her mind busied itself with practical matters, fresh tea to pack the supply of prepared food for the child, and then the necessary warming of it at the right intervals; she sent for something to eat for herself, she arranged her baggage and wraps for the most space. But all the time another part of her was back with Jane, repeating the warning never to intrude again into the peace and truth of her life.

In the morning Amy's father and mother were both at the train and when they saw her they ran toward her exclaiming together. "Word's come through from Howard—he's in Norway and he's all right." Her father caught her. "Look out, dear, don't faint!" for she had turned weak and dizzy with the joy of the good news. Then they all talked at the same time and Amy looked from one to the other, resting in their sure and stable affection, returning it, feeling herself bound round once more in its dear familiar security. As they got into a cab Mrs. Lowe took the baby. "How tiny!" she said. "Neither of us quite believed it when you wrote you'd adopted a baby. What's her name?"

"Oh, rather crazy. But nice. She looks a healthy young one," answered her father.

"She's a darling, very good. Only there's a lot more to taking care of babies than I imagined. We'll talk about her after awhile. Tell me about Howard, every single thing you know."

They didn't, it now seemed, know very much beyond the fact that he and Professor Ellert had managed to get to Norway, but how and when they would be able to leave there no one could tell. The State Department was trying to arrange passage. "I knew this war was coming," said Professor Lowe, "but I didn't expect it quite so soon. It should have been two or three years later."

"They didn't consult you!" mocked his wife gently.

The cab turned off toward the Crescent. "Oh Mother," said Amy, "I won't go home with you. I think I ought to get back into my own house and establish the baby there. She has so much paraphernalia it will muss up your kitchen and bother old Lillian."

"But darling, you're more than welcome to muss up the kitchen and I don't believe Lillian will mind very much."

"Mother, you know she'll rave." In the end it was arranged that Amy should go to her own house and that her mother would stay with her for the first few days. "But I'll go on home now," said Mrs. Lowe, "and bring back things for lunch, and your 'old cradle.'"

"And any of my old baby clothes you've got tucked away. She has hardly anything to wear." (To Be Continued.)

AMERICAN POOL CHIEF GIVES ASSURANCE

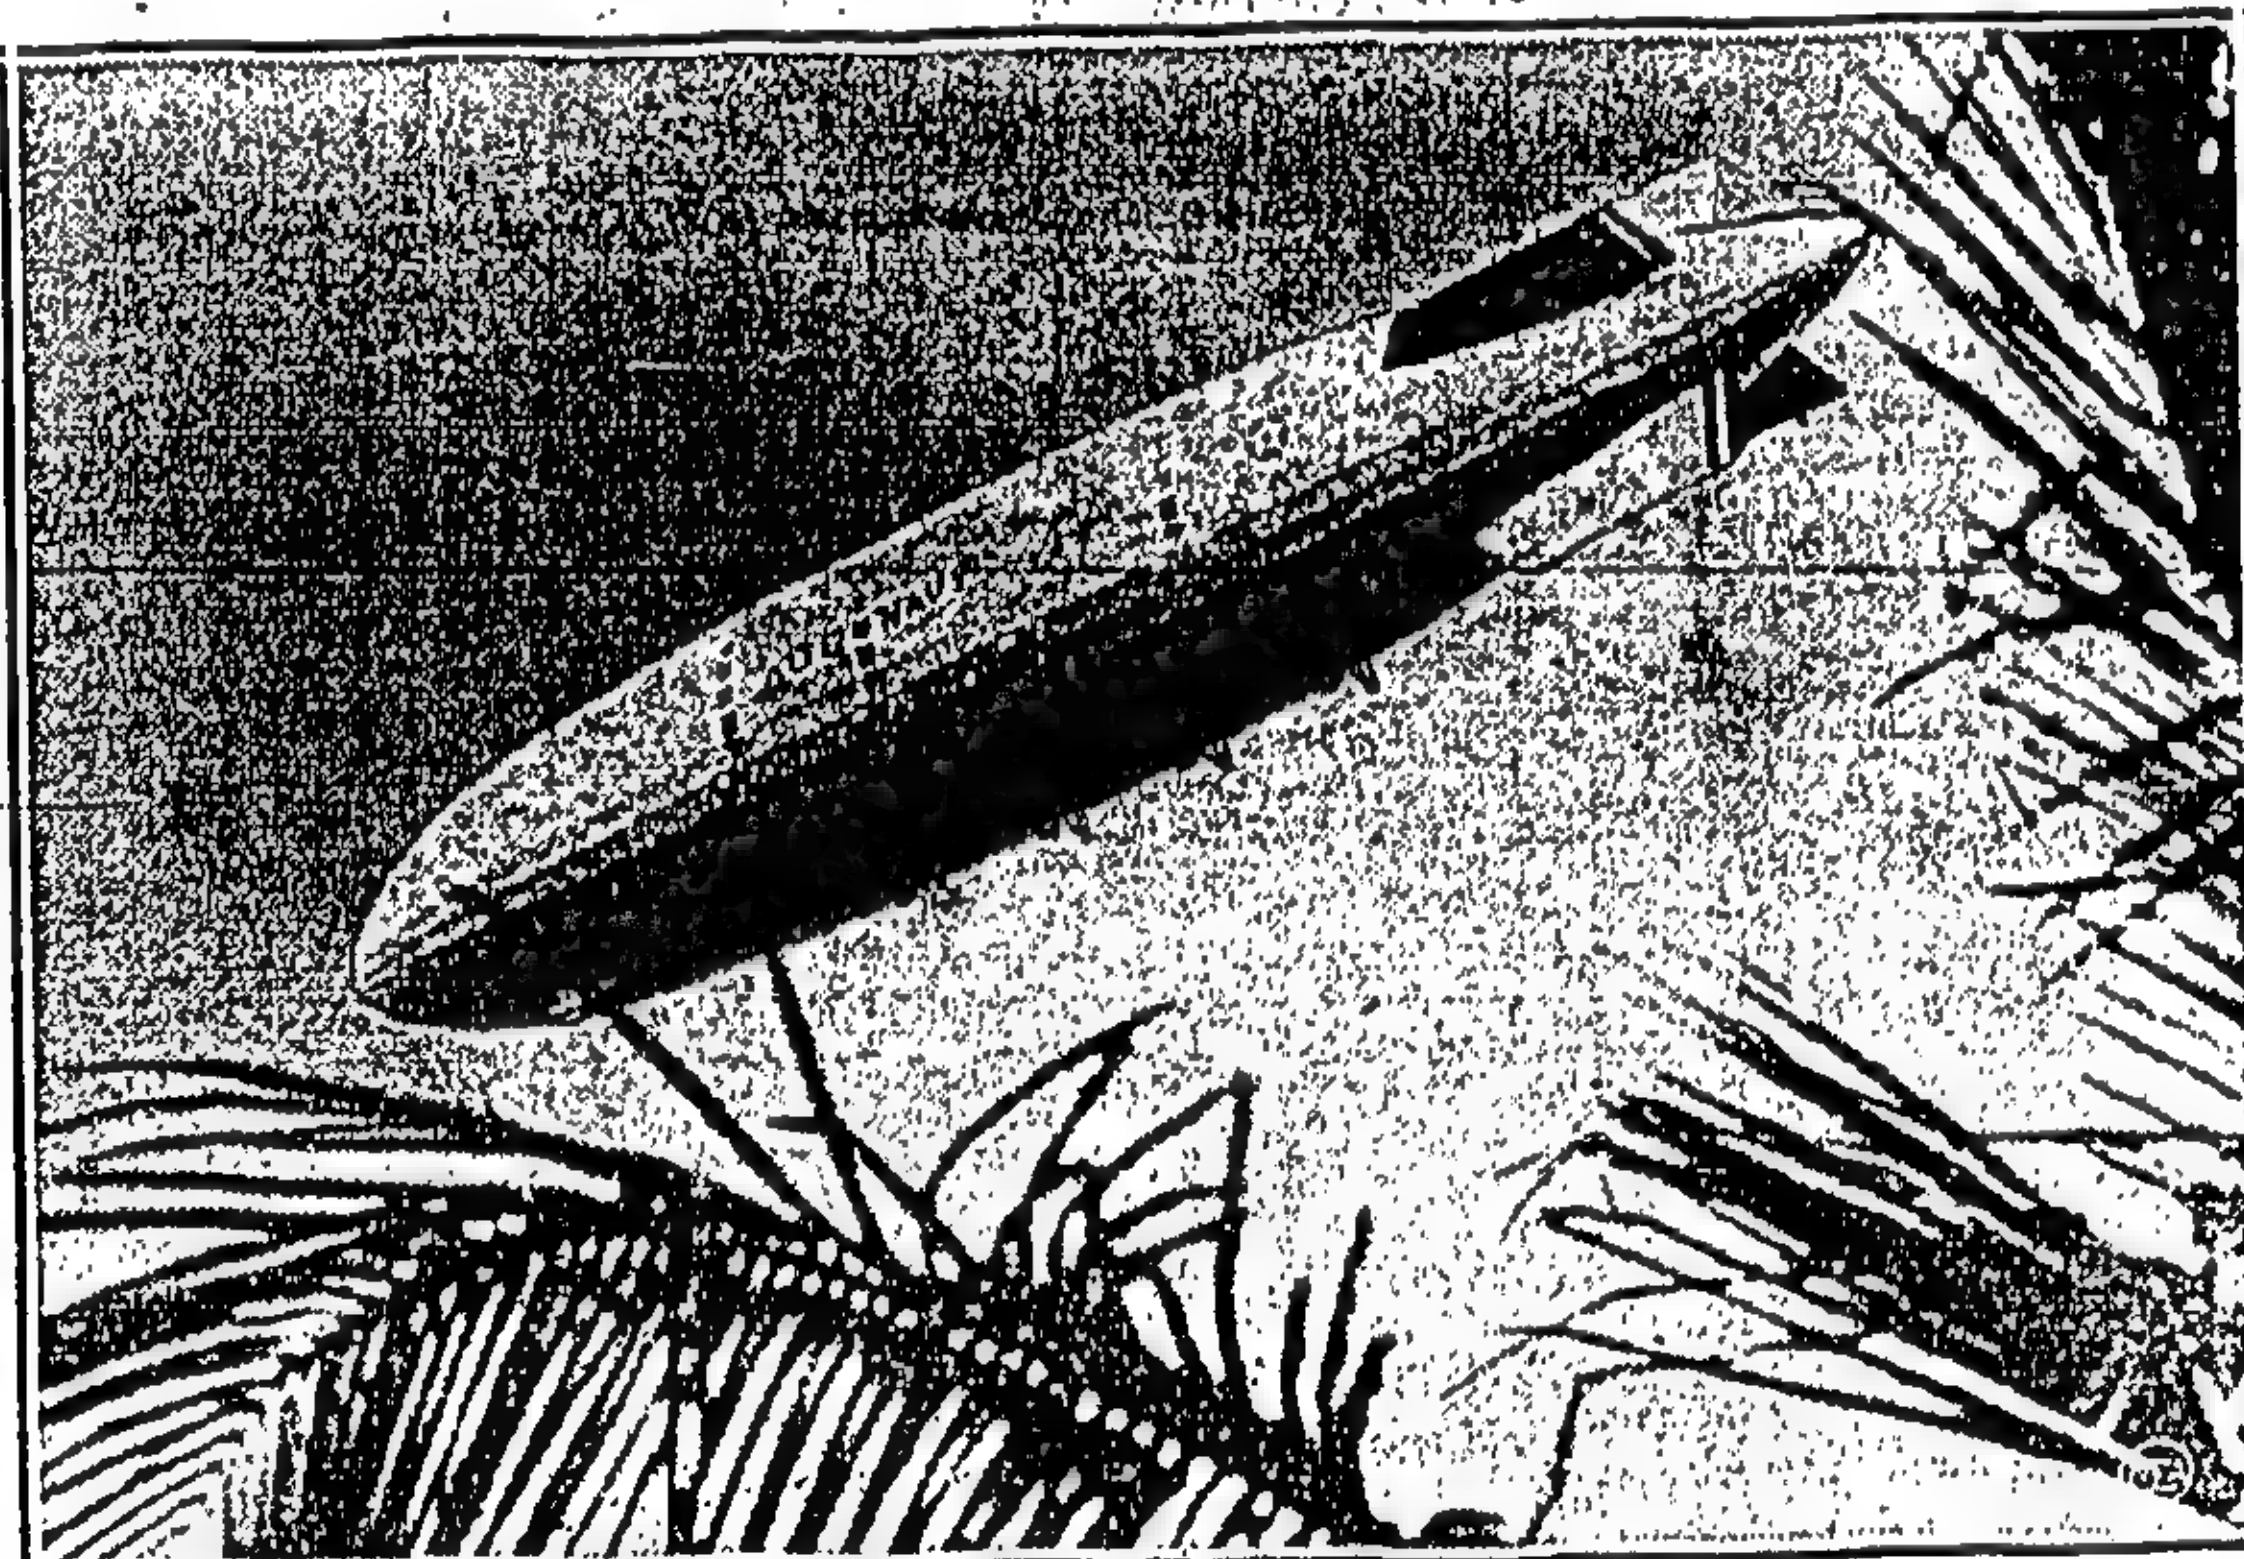

New York, Aug. 1.

The manager of the Cotton Pool, Mr. Johnston, to-day reiterated that the pool's holdings would not be dumped on the market or disposed of in a manner calculated to disturb unduly either the spot cotton market or general economic conditions.

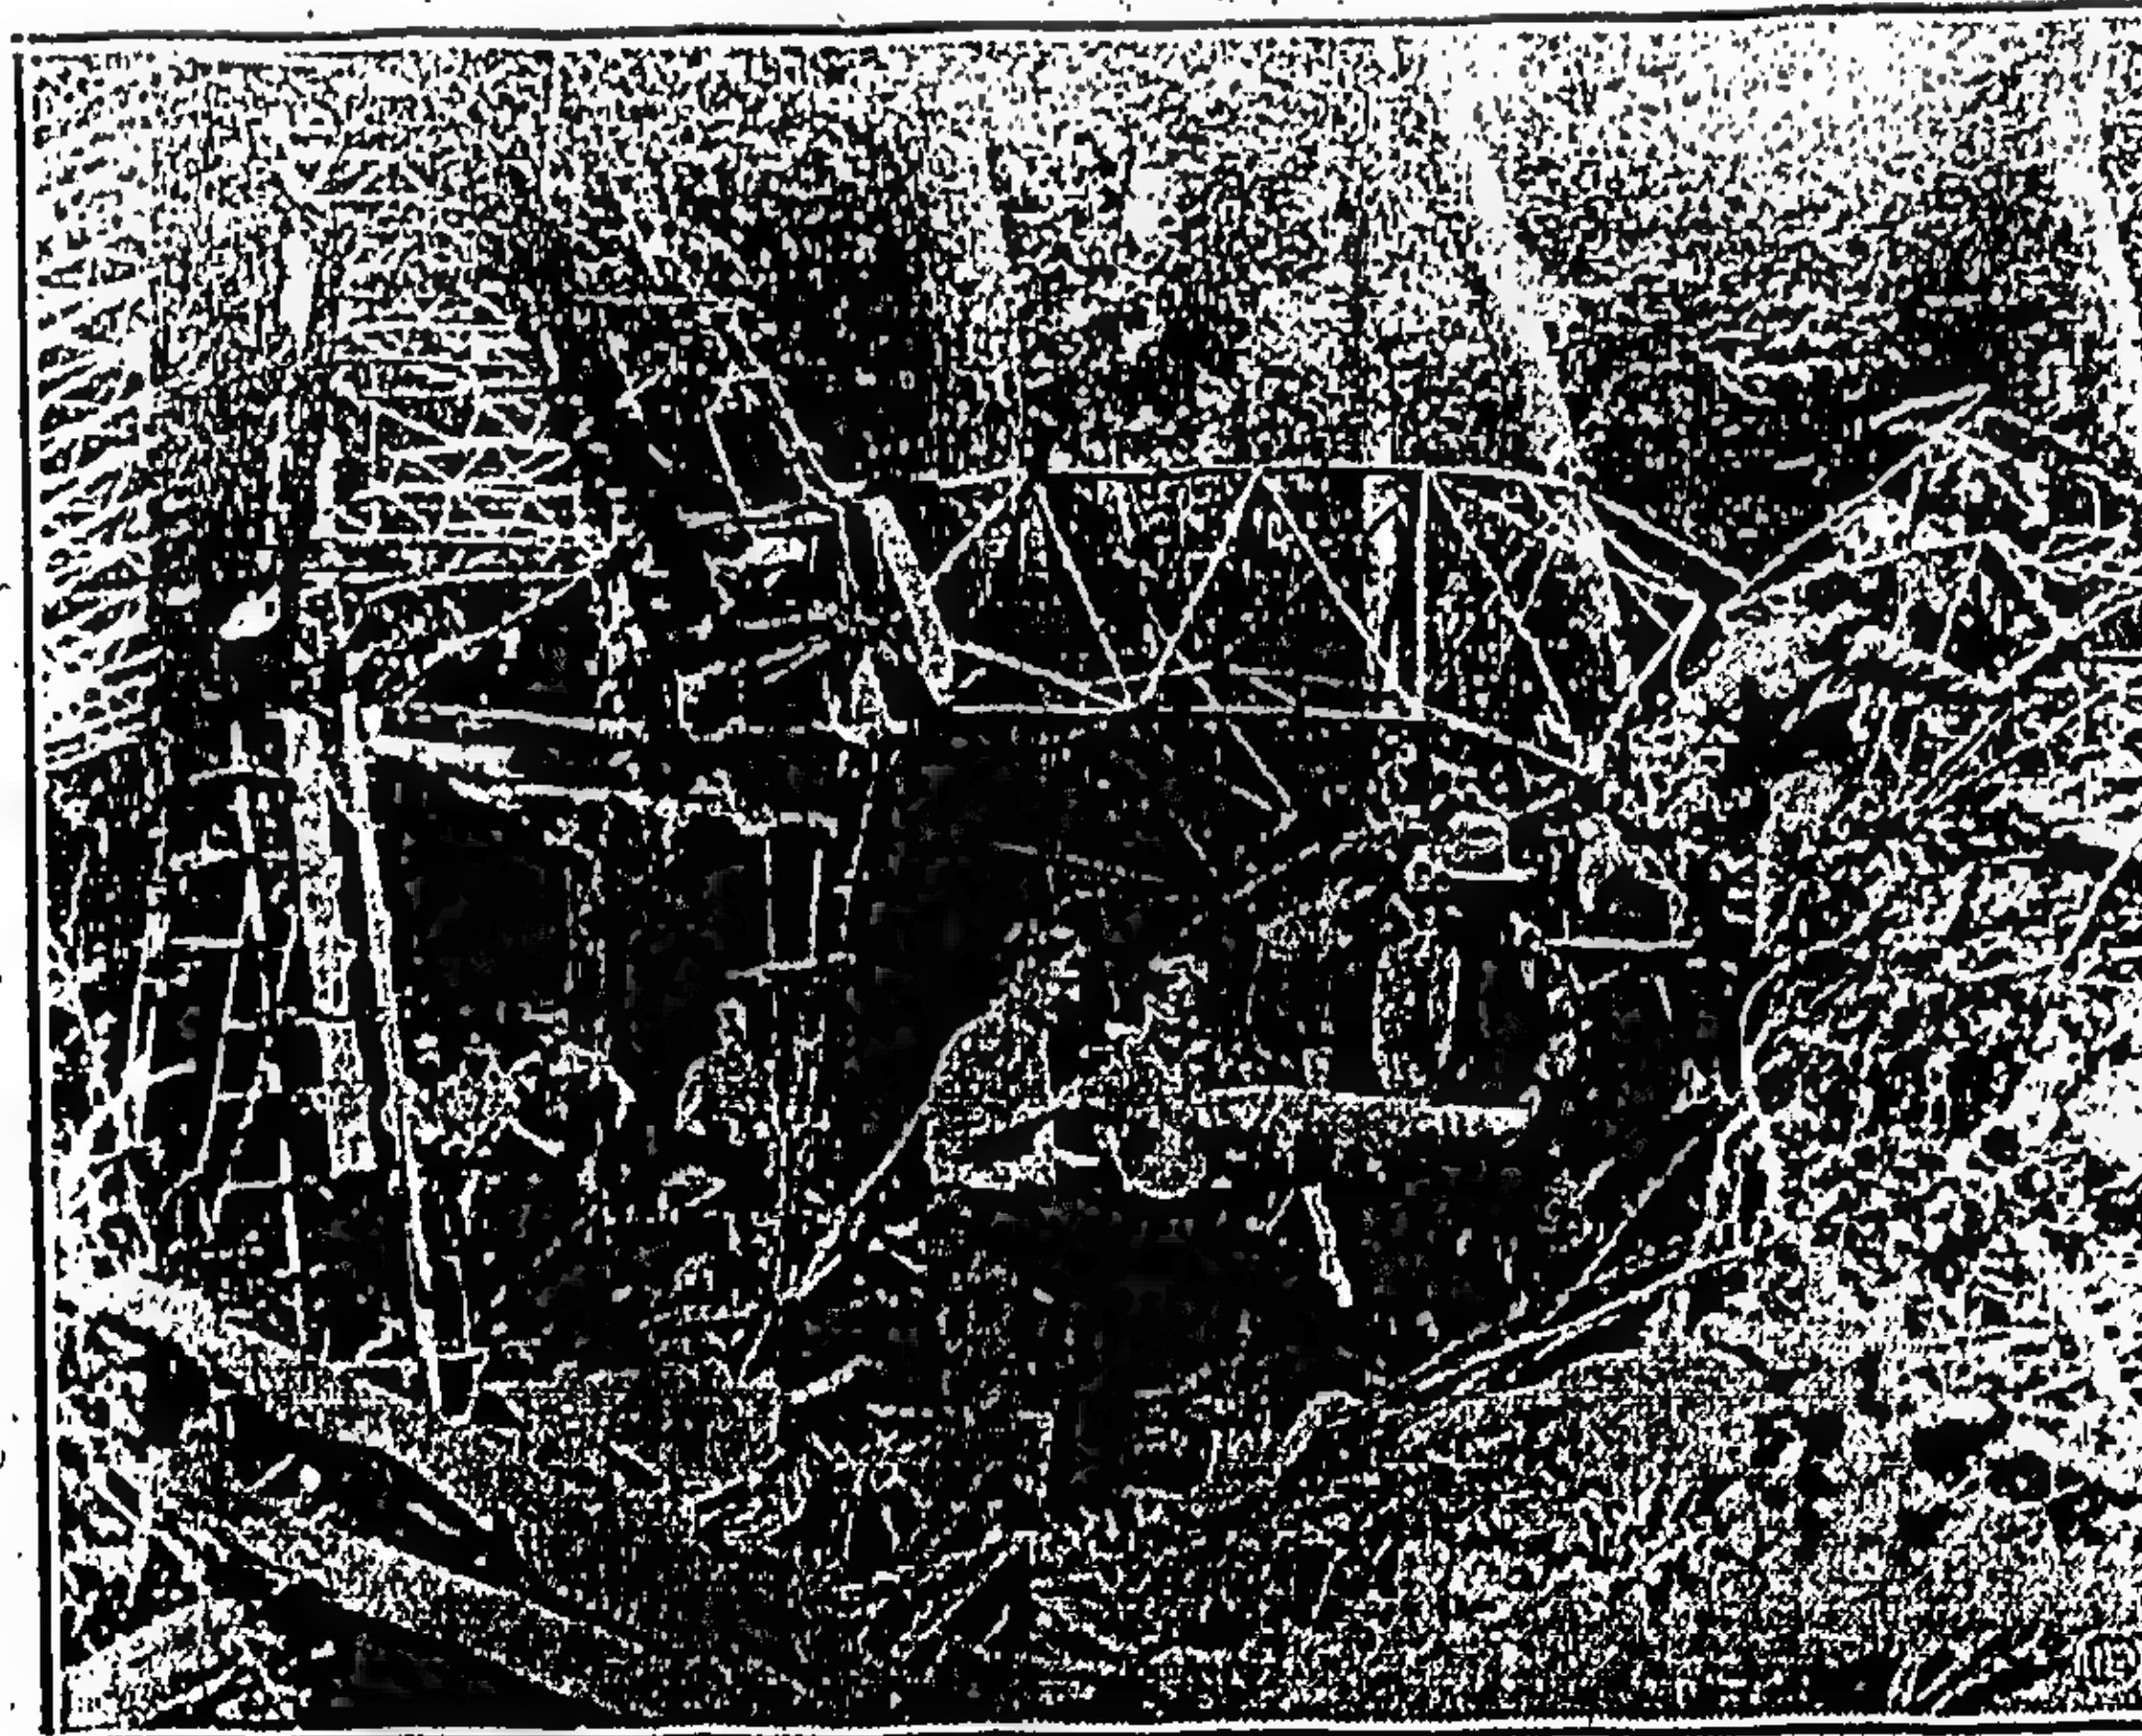

There had been some apprehension that America might dump her cotton stocks, with a consequent disastrous effect upon the market. —Reuter.

Terminating an impressive meeting of 50,000 Roman Catholics in Cleveland, Knights of St. John, shown here, formed a huge hollow cross about an altar, while within its lanes, more than 1,000 priests and acolytes massed, as the Host was raised in benediction. The throng had gathered to welcome the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, archbishop of Lodi, on the first visit of an apostolic delegate to the diocese.

A gleam of silver against a tropical background, the Mason is seen floating majestically over Miami, Fla., on its way to join the U. S. fleet. The air giant carried a crew of 100.

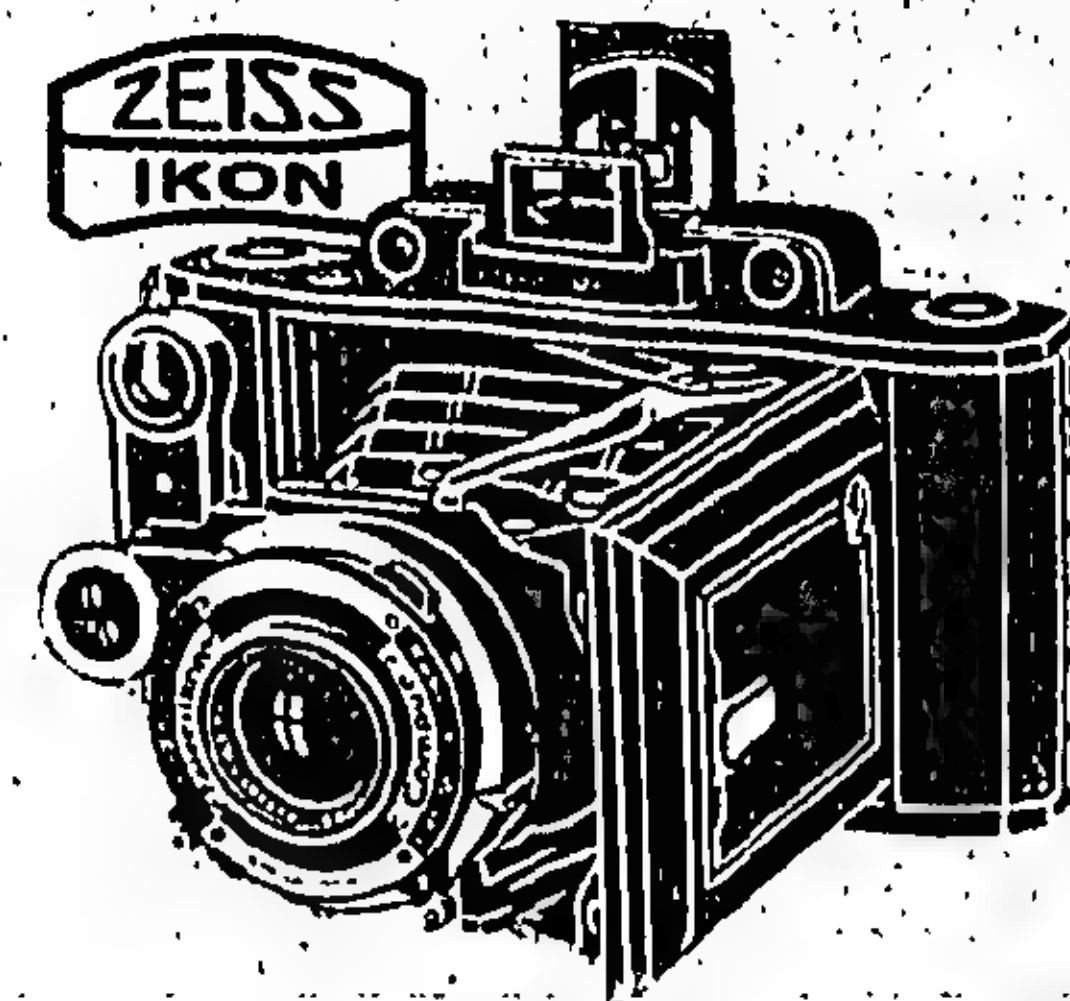

This twisted and charred wreckage was all that remained of the Curtiss Condor airliner which crashed near Livingston Manor, N. Y., in the Catskills, carrying two pilots, a stewardess, and four passengers to death. Members of the searching party are shown holding part of the propeller, with the skeleton of the tail framework reared at the left. The cause of the explosion of chemicals caused the fatal plunge was probed after pilots said they found in luggage of a passenger.

WELCOMED BACK FROM ABROAD

After a four months' tour in Europe and America, five members of the Kwangtung Provincial Government Air Mission returned to Hongkong early this morning by the Italian liner Conte Verde en route to Canton.

The party consists of General Wong Kwong-yue, Commander of the Canton Air Forces, Chang de Suen, Adj.-General of the Air Bureau, Ding Gay-chue, Second Squadron Commander, Mui Lung-on, Chief of the Aeroplane Factory, and Cheng Shut-ling, Secretary of the Air Bureau. A number of Canton officials and air officers welcomed the mission, which will leave for Canton to-morrow evening.

Interviewed, General Wong Kwong-yue said that during the four months' stay abroad the mission visited England, America, France, Italy and Germany and were thoroughly impressed by the progress of the foreign air forces. The mission called at the Air Ministries of the countries visited and in each case they were accorded the most cordial welcome. Opportunity was taken to see numerous aerial bases, aerodromes and aircraft factories.

Answering a query, General Wong Kwong-yue said the rumours that the mission had purchased big consignments of aeroplanes abroad were not true, as the mission was instructed to confine its work to observation and study of aerial technique.

FUNERAL OF MR. SOUZA

MANY PORTUGUESE PAY TRIBUTE

The loss of a well known and popular resident in the death on Tuesday of Mr. Francisco Xavier Souza, was mourned by a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral yesterday at the Roman Catholic Cemetery, Happy Valley.

Deceased was 63 years of age and had spent practically all his life in the Colony, being for a great period employed by Humphrey's Estate Co.

For nearly two years, however, illness had kept him indoors.

A widow, three sons and four daughters are left.

Father Rossi conducted the last rites, the chief mourners being Messrs. S. L. and R. Souza, (sons) and Mrs. Tavares, and Misses. H. L. and N. Souza (daughters).

Deceased's brothers were present with a large number of the Portuguese community and others, among them being: Messrs. A. Gosano, A. M. Pereira, A. C. Goldenberg, H. H. Xavier, J. F. Tavares, A. N. BIRTH ON LINER.

CHINESE BECOME PARENTS. EN VOYAGE

The Empress of Asia berthed yesterday with its first god-daughter Asian Wu, a girl born to Mr. and Mrs. Wu Pak-chun on board the vessel on Monday.

The mother and child were cared for by the ship's doctor, Dr. H. B. Gabraith, and are well and happy.

Mr. Wu embarked with his wife at Shanghai on Sunday evening and early next morning just before the vessel was scheduled to leave, Mrs. Wu was confined and the child was born. The event was followed with keen interest by the passengers who enquired solicitously and paid a visit to the baby. The parents decided to christen the girl Asian, and as such she was recorded on the ship's books.

A law student, Mr. Wu hails from Canton and the family is at present staying in the Colony.

BRITAIN'S AIR FRONTIER

Whether Mr. Baldwin intended to attach any special significance to his "Rhine frontier" declaration or not, it is clear that it is being invested abroad with an importance which may or may not be justified. In plain terms, Mr. Baldwin says that with the growth of aviation, old frontiers have disappeared, with the result that for defensive purposes
Britain's frontier is on the Rhine.
The inference, of course, is that if invasion ever seriously threatens Britain, the danger will come from that quarter. This possibility has obviously been much in the mind of the British Government lately, proof of which fact is to be found in the statements, guarded in character, admittedly, which have emanated from official quarters in support of the decision to embark on large-scale expansion of the Royal Air Force. The whole basis of the Government's plans rests on the point that in the present troubled state of Europe, Britain cannot afford to trust her defences to an Air Force of lesser strength than that of her aerial-ly strongest neighbour. Accordingly, Germany does not at the moment fall within the latter category, but in Mr. Baldwin's references to the possible use of civil craft for bombing purposes, there is to be detected an anxiety that Britain should not run the risk of being caught napping.
Since the Government's decision to build up a strong air arm, there has been a disposition in some quarters to interpret the move as indicating that Britain has lost faith in the efficacy of the maintenance of peace by the collective system of guarantees.
Indeed the London News-Chronicle recently went so far as to declare that neither Mr.
Baldwin nor Sir John Simon really believe in that system.
"Thus," remarked the journal,
"the world is the drift to a shambles of another 1914 because those who should have been the guardians of the peace lacked both the courage of their professions and the sincerity to live up to them." How much truth there is in the charge, the future will reveal; it may be merely another way of stating that certain facts disclosing the grim realities of the situation have latterly come to light.
Britain has most decidedly shown a marked reluctance recently to enter into any fresh commitments on the Continent, and the Government attitude on that point certainly reflects public opinion. One commentator on the situation, after pointing out that Britain fears attack from the air while France fears attack from the air and the land as well, caustically remarked

NOTES OF THE DAY

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Bishop Hall has put forward a strong plea for the abolition of capital punishment in Hongkong.
He argues from the humanitarian point of view and urges an experimental suspension for twenty years, doubtless convinced in his own mind that the results would justify final abandonment of the life for a life doctrine. It is safe to assume that any campaign of officially sponsored by Church leaders would command widespread public sympathy. It is a popular appeal in itself. The arguments advanced by the Bishop may easily sway many who have formed no convictions one way or the other on the issues raised.
And there must be few who have considered the subject from a purely academic standpoint, free of the prejudices induced by particular murder trials, and can contemplate with equanimity the legalised slaying of a fellow-man, whatever his offence against Society.

DETERRENT VALUES

The cases for and against capital punishment need not be recited here. It is sufficient to stress that the main justification, the deterrent value of the death penalty, is one impossible of accurate assessment. No one can form an estimate of the uncommitted crimes, those instances where the will to murder has been present and fear or caution have intervened. In this connection, the results of abolition in other countries are of little practical value considered. No proper standard of comparison exists for gauging the potential results of abolition of the death penalty in this Colony alongside those in, say, Holland.
Psychology comes in importantly in the estimation of the deterrent value of the death penalty.
Possessing more terrors for the human mind than the thought of the man's nose. Would it be more humanitarian to rob such a man of his liberty or to end it quickly?
If common humanity is being considered, the study must not be confined to the feelings of those whose sensibilities are revolted by the taking of a man's life. His own, particularly if he is a victim of circumstances, are worth more thought.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE

Probing the issues on these lines any further would quickly get the investigator into deep water.
Were the law able to differentiate, for instance, it would probably insist upon imposing the penalty upon those possessing the greater terrors for the condemned man. It is easier to fall back upon the principle that legal murder should have no place in a well-balanced Society. Can this be claimed for Hongkong? It is difficult to accept the Bishop's view that Hongkong, of all places in the Empire, is a suitable laboratory for experiments in social reform. It has always lagged, and it probably always will. Moreover, the question is being offered an opportunity for self-support on the one hand, and on the other a wide scope of training for life under new conditions, on a scale, and
with a swift, yet wise, adaptation of means to ends unparalleled in the history of education.

The basic idea at the Norris training schools seems to be that consideration for human life should take precedence over every conventional educational concept. It is taken for granted that the individual should be trained to meet every condition which may

The Norris Educational Plan which looks toward fitting men and women for a New Social Order.

By HOWARD COLBY IVES

"ALL Hope Restored to Those Who Enter Here." Such might well be the legend inscribed in bright lights over the town of Norris, rapidly assuming physical, social and educational coherence in northeastern Tennessee.

When Arthur E. Morgan, then in charge of the great project for controlling floods on the Miami River, received in 1920 an unexpected call to the presidency of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio, an all but moribund institution, one may imagine that he little thought that fourteen years later he would be directing an educational institution covering 42,000 square miles with some millions of students who are going to learn many fundamental lessons in living whether they enroll in any classes or not. In a sense this is rhetorical hyperbole. In a deeper sense it is a plain statement of fact.

When Henry Ward Beecher auctioned a slave girl from his pulpit, he did more to educate the nation in the horrors of slavery than any amount of preaching could do. So, to the thoughtful, and that means to all of us who are beginning to hope, the whole Tennessee River Basin is becoming an object lesson and a training school.

The present educational system, which has little bearing on a rapidly changing order, is, manifestly, an anachronism. The fact that every year thousands of students are turned out of our schools and universities fitted for trades, artisan, and business which professions and businesses which have little or no use for them is a falling barometer threatening violent social stormy weather. Morgan's College was Dr. Morgan's answer to the question posed by exactly such pressing conditions in our national life. "How shall we fit our youth for twentieth-century life?" Norris and the whole valley is an answer to the same question couched in Homeric terms.

Employed at Norris Dam and Norris townships are approximately 4,000 persons. Ninety-eight per cent of them, again speaking approximately, are men. Practically all of them are drawn from the towns, villages and hills of the basin. They have been carefully chosen from many thousands of applicants because of their character, ability in some particular direction, general intelligence and desire for self-improvement.

Most of them, if not all, are of sure American pioneering stock.
They are distinguished by an independence of spirit, impatient of dependence on control. They are proud of their hill-country heritage, free from most of the modern artificial dissipation and with a unity for self-support on the one hand, and on the other a wide
scope of training for life under
new conditions, on a scale, and
with a swift, yet wise, adaptation
of means to ends unparalleled in the history of education.

The basic idea at the Norris
training schools seems to be that consideration for human life
should take precedence over every conventional educational concept. It is taken for granted that the individual should be trained to
meet every condition which may

The Very Idea!

BOOK OF ASUWERUS
CHAPTER 8.

NOW Asuwerus made him ready to preach to the people of Kong even that which the Gods of Eng had commanded him.

2. And he commanded with himself saying: In what manner shall I go up and preach unto this people, for they are numerous and of divers tribes?

3. So he sought council of the gods in his own chamber and prayed. And a small still voice called to him, out of the darkness saying: Asuwerus, and he answered: Here am I.

4. And the voice said: Go thou up and preach unto the Levites, for they are the chosen People,
and their tribes hearken unto them.
They do a thing, and the residue of the people follow as a flock of sheep.

5. So Asuwerus girded up his loins and set forth. In his hand he carried a staff, yea in his right hand, for the way was long and the ascend thereof steep.

6. And he toiled grievously, for the going up was hard, and he was sore oppressed and cried: Oh! that the gods had commanded me a chariot, even a chariot of fire.

7. So that my burden might be eased and the ascent made easy to my feet. For I am old and the way plagues me heavily.

8. After many days Asuwerus beheld at length the dwelling places of the Levites, and behold they were good.

CHAPTER 9.

The Levites were a pious people who ruled the land of Kong and poured numerous libations before the gods. Their ways were cast in pleasant places.

2. Their houses were of stone carved and carved with all manner of carving. They stood on high.

3. And a cloud stood round about as it were a cloud of glory, so that when they spake, they were heard but seen not and the people marvelled.

4. For the Tribes of the Plain abased themselves saying verily these act as Gods. They prostrated themselves before them.

5. Now Asuwerus was sore afraid when he beheld the state of the people and said: Who am I that I should preach unto such as these?

6. For they are mighty and serve mighty Gods, yea they command all things, possessing many deeds. And he wrestled with his Soul.

7. But the Voles comforted him, saying: Content thee and go up for thou shalt surely prevail. Go in peace.

8. For the people of Kong are mighty but the Gods of Eng are mightier yet.

CHAPTER 10.

So Asuwerus purified him and arrayed himself in sackcloth and put ashes on his head, and he went up and prophesied unto the Levites.

2. And he cried: Harken ye, oh ye people of the land to the voice of the Gods of Eng. Yet Once, perchance it shall be a little while, the desire of all nations shall come.

3. For there shall be war in the land and many enemies shall attack, therefore be ye prepared.
Put off your purple and your fine linen and your life of ease.

4. And gird ye with a strong buckler that ye be not taken in surprise and perish.

5. For ye have strong defences on your cloud, and mighty ships upon the waters but they shall avail ye nought.

6. Prepare ye against the spirits of the air for their number shall be great. They shall darken the sun at noon.

7. And they shall pour down upon ye unclean vapours that ye shall see not, neither shall ye breathe. Ye shall be utterly undone.

8. Therefore prepare ye spirits likewise that shall command the air and destroy those that come against ye before they reach your shores.

9. And the Gods of Eng shall come to your aid. But only after many days. So Asuwerus finished and went to his place.

VIEWPOINT

Washington, Aug. 1.

The United States would probably consent to naval reductions provided the present ratios as between the principal sea-powers are maintained.

A personal opinion in favour of a twenty per cent. cut in armaments by all naval powers was expressed by the Secretary of the Navy Department, Mr. Claude Swann.

But, he stated, any agreement must be contingent upon the retention of the present ratios. Nothing has occurred since he attended the disarmament conference to change his conviction in favour of ratios.

"If we abandon them," he declared, "there is no telling where we should go."

"I do not believe that the United States should give Japan equality. I believe in a United States Navy second to none."—Reuter.

Vatican City, Aug. 1.

The Pope motored from the Vatican at 5.30 p.m. to-day to the Castel Gandolfo, where he will stay for six weeks' holiday.

This is his first holiday since he became Pope in 1922.

It is also interesting to note that he is the first Pope to reside outside the Vatican since 1870.

LOCAL JOURNAL

A local vernacular newspaper had judgment for $1,786 and costs awarded against them in their absence by Mr. Justice Jackson, Paines Judge, at the Supreme Court this morning when two separate actions were brought for breach of contract by Bitzer & Co., of Queen's Building.

Defendants were the Tin Nam newspaper, alias the Tin Nam Daily Press, of 53, Hollywood Road, and the actions against them were in respect of supplies of paper.

Mr. G. S. Ford, of Messrs. Wilkinson & Grist, represented plaintiffs, who were awarded judgment.

"These things were stolen from my desk," remarked Revenue Officer Grimmer in the Central Police Court this morning, when Chan Muk, a Fire Station coolie, appeared before Mr. Macfadyen charged with the theft of two opium pipes and four opium pipe tops from the Revenue Office, the property of the Government.

The defendant admitted the theft of only two opium pipe tops.

Revenue Officer Grimmer stated that for the past six or seven months there had been thefts in the European Revenue Officers' office. His desk had been ransacked, letters had been stolen from pigeon holes and suspicion lay with the Europeans, which was rather unpleasant. Police Court exhibits had also been taken from desks.

In the early hours of yesterday morning, Revenue Officer Major caught the defendant red-handed. Two opium pipes fell from his jacket as he attempted to run away.

R. O. Grimmer added that his Worship would remember that some time ago a big lot of opium was stolen from the office.

Defendant had been a coolie in the Fire Brigade for twelve months and had ample time at night to prowling when the lights were all out and the doors not locked. There was valuable clothing kept in the office.

Detective-Sergeant Hemsley stated the defendant's salary was $15 a month.

Two months' hard labour was imposed.

CRUDELY FORGED
NOTE*POSSESSOR'S POOR EXCUSE

It was alleged against Ng Shing-fai, aged 19, that after he attempted to pass off a forged $10 banknote of the Chartered Bank, he told the police officer that he was employed at the bank as a paper printer and that he received the note with his salary. This was found to be untrue.

Brought before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Magistracy this morning, the youth denied that he knew the note was a forgery.

Detective-Sergeant T. J. Hemsley stated that at 2.15 a.m. yesterday, the defendant went to a stall in Jubilee Street and purchased a tin of cigarettes for 80 cents. He tendered the ten-dollar note which was found to be a forgery. A foki followed him towards the Canton wharf and on sighting a constable had him arrested. When searched, the defendant was found to have $1.32 good money.

Mr. J. M. Pinna, clerk at the Chartered Bank, deposed to the note being a very crude forgery, being easily distinguished on account of its very bad printing.

One month's hard labour was imposed.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

HE THAT WILL NOT STOOP FOR A PIN WILL NEVER BE WORTH A POUND.—Proverb.

The rainfall recorded at Botanic Gardens during July totalled 16.17 inches. There were only eleven days when no rain fell.

Mr. Watson, second officer of the steamer Tishwan, has reported to the police that while the vessel was on a journey from Canton to Hongkong, a second-class Chinese woman passenger jumped overboard and was not seen again.

Ng San, a Sanitary Department scavenging coolie, was fined $10, or fourteen days' hard labour, by Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Magistracy this morning for stealing an earthenware jar and cover from a stall in Staunton Street. Sanitary Inspector Kerrison stated that the defendant had been employed by the Sanitary Department since 1925 and his departmental record was clear.

Lam Cho, a boxing instructor, was fined $25 by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a charge of possession of two knives, four fighting irons and a spear, without a licence, at No. 51 Wellington Street. Defendant contended that the weapons formerly belonged to the Nam Mo Association, which was closed down and the weapons were then transferred to him. He admitted the charge. Sub-Inspector A. V. Barker prosecuted.

Charged before Mr. Hamilton, this morning, with loitering on private premises and disturbing the peace, three at "Donum" Sanson Road, the residence of Mr. A. Stevenson, manager of the Dairy Farm, Chu Hing, unemployed, was fined $10 or 14 days on each charge, the sentences to run consecutively. Inspector Housman mentioned that defendant said he was cutting the trees for medicine. The trees were badly damaged. The gardener caught the defendant in the act.

Secret British Wool Process*REVOLUTION IN TREATMENT

London, Aug. 1.

A secret process, whereby the quality of British textile products will be improved and the costs of production lowered, has been evolved after extensive experiments in the use of ionized oils by the Wool Industries Research Association.

In the place of the present treatment of raw wool, which is first scoured with alkali and then softened with olive oil, and then again scoured to remove the oil, the new ionized oils evolved will both scour and soften the wool and can afterwards be removed by washing.

Wool thus treated is much whiter and softer than that produced by the old methods.

The new oils can also be effectively used for algal, hemp, jute and other vegetable fibres, and the development is considered likely to prove of the utmost importance to the Crown Colonies.

NEW POSSIBILITIES.

The by-products of the various processes are also valuable and it is believed that the invention offers great possibilities for many Empire products which are at present of little value.

A large factory, capable of producing numerous types of ionized oils on a commercial scale has just been opened near London.—British Wireless.

London, Aug. 1.

A discussion has been proceeding during the last five weeks with the delegation from Poland which has come to London for negotiation on trade matters.

Considerable progress has been made in clearing the ground, and the discussions will be resumed early in the Autumn.—British Wireless.

AIR MAIL APPOINTMENTS

London, Aug. 1.

Rear Admiral Sir Murray Suter, M.P., and Major General Sir Frederick Sykes have been appointed members of the Post Office Air Mail Panel, and Group Captain Primrose, Royal Air Force (Retired), been appointed Air Mail Adviser to the Post Office.—British Wireless.

The A.B. President Hoover arrives this evening at 8 o'clock and will sail at 4 a.m. to-morrow (Friday).

THREE WOULD-BE ROBBERS*GAOL SENTENCES IMPOSED

An attempted armed robbery on the second floor of No. 214 Hennessy Road was nipped in the bud, when the police got wind of the affair and arrested the would-be robbers on the staircase of the premises on July 30.

Three men, Chan Tak-fan, Lau Po-wan and Fook Wah, were charged, as a result, before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with conspiracy to commit an armed robbery and with possession of an imitation revolver, two knives, a piece of string and a piece of wire. Chan Tak-fan was further charged with the theft of a felt hat.

Accused admitted the charges, and were fined $250, or three months' hard labour, each on the first count and six months' hard labour on the second charge. The sentences to run concurrently. Chan Tak-fan was also sentenced to one month's hard labour on the third charge, to run concurrently with his other sentence. Detective Sergeant Goodwin said he received information of the robbery, and proceeded to 214 Hennessy Road. The first defendant came up the staircase followed by the other two, and all were arrested.

BOGUS DISTRICT
WATCHMAN*ARRESTS MAN, THEN RELEASES HIM

A fine of $200, or three months' hard labour, was imposed by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on Tse Fong, unemployed, charged with having impersonated a district watchman in Western Street yesterday.

Inspector Andrew said the complainant, Chan Ming, was walking down Western Street outside the No. 7 Police Station, when defendant stopped and searched him. Chan Sam, a district watchman, watched the whole proceedings. The defendant took the complainant as far as No. 7 Police Station, and then for some reason or other released him. Chan Sam questioned defendant, and asked him who he was. Defendant replied that he was a district watchman. He was then asked for his card, but replied that he had left it in the watchman's hut. He also stated he had been a watchman for two months. He was then arrested. Apparently defendant's idea was to extort some money from complainant on the grounds that he was a police ticket runner, which, in fact, he was.

$22,000 CLAIM SUCCEEDS*GUNNY BAG CONTRACT BREACH

A claim for $22,760.88 brought by Davie Boag & Co., Ltd., of Queen's Building, against Leung Pak-him, merchant, of 22, Kwai Heung Street, was undefended when it came before the Chief Justice, Mr. A. D. A. MacGregor, at the Supreme Court this morning.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon, instructed by Mr. J. E. Prentiss, of Messrs. Hastings & Co., appeared for plaintiff and said the claim was for damages for breach of contract. Defendant had five contracts with his clients to take over 450 bales of gunny bags but, though an extension of time was granted, he failed to take delivery of 300 bales. The amount claimed was interest and the difference in price between the contract and the market price, the latter being ascertained from the Calcutta market on February 1, 1934, when the contract was declared broken.

Lee Si-wing, comrade of the plaintiff firm gave evidence, and judgment and costs were awarded plaintiff.

STOLE TIN OF CIGARETTES*GETS THREE-MONTH SENTENCE

While walking past a stall in Pedder Lane yesterday, in broad daylight, a Chinese snatched a tin of 556 State Empress cigarettes, valued at $1.50, and made off towards Queen's Road. The stallholder, a woman, shouted and attracted a constable who arrested the man.

Charged before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning, defendant pleaded guilty. Sub-Inspector Miat: There is no record against him in Hongkong. He is a banished man from Singapore. Three months' hard labour was passed.

COOLIE ASSAULTS SHOEMAKERS*SENT TO PRISON FOR SIX MONTHS

Six months' hard labour was imposed by Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court yesterday on Ho Yung, a night soil coolie, whom he convicted on a charge of assaulting two Chinese shoe-makers, causing bodily harm.

Detective-Sergeant J. Shepherd stated that the fight took place at the junction of Pottinger Street and Wellington Street on Monday night. Defendant had tried to get money from the first complainant and his friend, and they alleged he was forcing them to join a Society and they refused. The defendant was alleged to have struck both complainants with an axe which was not found at the time. An Indian constable arrived on the scene and chased the defendant into the second floor of Stanley Street, where a further search for the knife was made without result. When searched, the defendant was found to have a tanner's knife in his possession.

DAVIS CUP TANGLE: WHAT DO THE NATIONS WANT?

END OF QUALIFYING COMPETITION IN SIGHT

OLD PROBLEM OF CONGESTED ZONE INEVITABLE

(By "Veritas").

Sponsors of the scheme under which the qualifying competition of the Davis Cup saw the light of day, are faced with the prospects of defeat. A body of opinion, led in the first place by countries such as Austria, Czechoslovakia and Switzerland, has now grown to dimensions sufficient, apparently, to cause the abrupt ending of this new feature of the Davis Cup competition.

The decision reached by a big majority at a private meeting of the Davis Cup committee, needs only the support of a few nations who were not represented, for the qualifying competition, which was introduced as an effort to meet a difficult situation, to become a thing of the past.

This would complete the disillusionment of Britain, who for four years struggled with the problem of conducting the Davis Cup on less complicated lines, and has met with only rebuffs from the countries for which so much work was being carried out.

BRITAIN'S BURDEN.

While practically the whole of the competing nations in the European zone in 1930 and 1931 agreed that the existing method of conducting the tournament badly needed revision, causing at it did congested fixtures and unfortunate clashes with important championship dates, it was left to Britain to produce two concrete schemes.

One was the qualifying competition as it exists to-day, and the alternative a biennial tournament. South Africa, warmly in favour of the latter, and in 1932, when turning down Australia's suggestion for the formation of a South Eastern zone which would include South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, and wrote to the English L.T.A., that "In South Africa the feeling is very strong that the present method of playing for the Davis Cup is too lengthy for an annual event, and that playing it biennially will tend to increase the interest in it, and will be for the ultimate good of lawn tennis throughout the world."

South Africa has clung tenaciously to the idea of biennial competition, and when the smaller European nations began protesting against the impracticability of the qualifying competition, it seemed that the biennial event would be the natural alternative.

FINANCE ENTERS.

But once again finance has intruded itself, and has motivated, not only the abhorrence of the European nations to the qualifying competition, but also to the idea of the Davis Cup being competed for but once every two years.

To the small countries such as Switzerland, Monaco, Austria, Spain, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Roumania etc., whose chances of reaching the more important stages of the competition such as the zone and inter-zone finals are practically nil, the Davis Cup provides merely an excellent means of swelling L.T.A. coffers.

The annual elimination of four countries from the early stages of the European Zone means chances of an attractive draw being lost. Deprived of the opportunity of meeting countries such as Australia, Japan, France, Germany and Czechoslovakia, and confronted with heavy expenditure through participation, the weaker nations feel that entry into the Davis Cup competition is not worth the candle.

On the other hand, the return to status quo means the reintroduction of the problems which beset the competition up to 1933. The countries have turned down two schemes for the elimination of these troubles, and if any alternative to it is to be suggested, it will surely have to come from these participants.

AMERICA'S POSITION.

It is not surprising, of course, to find South Africa's proposal rejected. America would naturally be against it, for America's slogan has always been "The Davis Cup first and last," and any effort to restrict the tournament would be bound to meet with opposition from the founders of the competition.

Nevertheless there is a growing feeling among the countries that a biennial event is the solution to the various problems as demonstrated by the voting at the private meeting.

In a later message, received this morning, Reuter says that it is understood that twelve voted for, and eleven against, the holding of a biennial contest, but no change in this direction will be made, since two-thirds majority is necessary.

It is further understood that Germany and France opposed the change, although nothing has been announced officially.

STALEMATE.

So that at the moment a stalemate exists, the competitors seem to want neither one nor the other scheme, by which it is claimed the problems of conducting the tournament will at least be lessened.

But whatever the possibilities of growing opinion in favour of a biennial competition, it does seem fairly conclusive that after this year, the qualifying competition will be a thing of the past. A noble effort by Britain tumbled under foot.

HELEN HICKS REGRETS CANNOT PLAY IN ENGLAND

New York. There is one thing that Miss Helen Hicks regrets in connection with her startling decision to become a "businesswoman golfer," and that is that it renders her ineligible to compete in the British Women's Golf Championship again.

So far the British championship has defied all attempts by American women to win it and it is the only major links event for women that Miss Hicks has not won.

The loss of Miss Hicks to American women's golf is a keen one. Her decision came like a bombshell to the thousands of players, and followers of the game, who adore her.

"How about the women's international team?" was one of the first questions asked by leading women golfers. They referred to the team which will oppose the visiting English team at the Chevy Chase Club in Maryland in September. While the team has not yet been named, it was a foregone conclusion that Miss Hicks would be selected, as she was in 1932, and would be one of the mainstays of the side.

"Why did she not wait until after the international matches?" asked Miss Maureen O'Leary, the Metropolitan champion, who also played on the 1932 team.

Germany's Jewish Athletes Bar To Be Lifted

IN CONNECTION WITH THE WORLD OLYMPICS IN 1936

New York, Aug. 1. The International Olympic Committee is convinced the Nazi government intends to abide by its promise to select athletes for the 1936 Olympics in Berlin without religious or racial prejudice, Mr. William May Garland, Los Angeles capitalist and a member of the Committee said.

Mr. Garland, who returned from the meeting in Athens aboard the liner Rex, said the unanimous opinion of the delegates was that Germany had fulfilled the assurances of non-discrimination they gave in Vienna last year.

"I understand there will be a number of Jews on the German Olympic team," Mr. Garland said.

Rugby Union And Soccer Pros.

VITAL CHANGE OF LAW

It may be possible in the future for a British Rugby Union player to take part in Association football against Soccer professionals without becoming a professional in Rugby football.

An alteration to one of the laws of the game dealing with this matter was supported at the annual meeting in London last month of the Rugby Union.

The proposed change will have to be sanctioned by the International Board.

Another proposed change deals with the unaccounted try. In future it is hoped to distinguish this from a placed goal by a drop kick from the centre instead of a placed kick when play is resumed.

It is also proposed that when a player, after leaving the field through injury, desires to return he must seek permission first from the referee.

OLDEST CHAMPION LOSES TITLE

C. A. Pickett New Holder Of Welsh Pro. Golf Championship

C. A. Pickett, the twenty-five-year-old professional attached to the Craigiau Club, won the Welsh professional golf championship with an aggregate of 226 for seventy-two holes when the event was concluded on the Swansea Bay Club's course recently.

Pickett was successful by a margin of two strokes from Fred Collins (Llandudno), the veteran holder of the title. Pickett, who had been three strokes behind the leader at the end of the first two rounds, returned scores of 72 and 71.

He was one over four on his last round with only two holes to be played, but he secured a fine two at the seventeenth, where he put an iron shot a yard from the pin.

RECORD EQUALLED.

Collins, who was a stroke behind Pickett at the end of three rounds, started his last round with 3, 4, 2, and was four under four after seven holes.

He took six at the eighth, however, and had a similar figure at the sixteenth, where he took three putts.

Pickett, who has been at Craigiau for three and a half years, had never previously won an important open competition.

The record for the course held by R. Watts (Pennard), was equalled when D. David (Llandudno) accomplished a round of 70.

A surprising defeat was sustained by Gene Sarazen. He was eliminated in the second round by Al Watrous, who won by four and three.

NEW SWIMMING POOL FOR SHANGHAI IN 1935

COUNCIL APPROVES

When the next summer swimming season opens, Shanghai will have a new pool in the Western District, according to an announcement issued by the Shanghai Municipal Council last week.

The Shanghai Times understands that the new pool, construction work on which will start in December or January, in sufficient time for the baths to be ready for opening next summer, will occupy approximately the southern half of Singapore Park, and will be of Olympic dimensions, that is, 50 metres by 25 metres.

The baths will be situated on the corner of Singapore and Kinchoow roads, only a block from the new playing fields which are now under construction and will thus be convenient for players after games.

Provision for the construction of the baths will be made in the Works Committee's 1935 Budget. When the preliminary estimates of the Health Department were considered last February, an item of $7,000 to provide for additional dressing room accommodation at the open air swimming pool in Hongkew Park was deleted as the Committee was of the opinion that inasmuch as the congestion at the pool was great it was preferable to provide another pool rather than to incur additional expenditure on the existing one.

PROPOSAL ADOPTED.

It was accordingly decided that consideration should be given during the current year to the acquisition of a site for an additional swimming pool, and the Commissioner of Public Works was requested to present a recommendation thereon.

The Commissioner of Public Works submitted to the Works Committee a plan showing a pool at the south end of Cad. Lot 5970, Singapore Park. He stated that it was not proposed to proceed with this provision during the current year, but that if his proposal regarding the site were approved, the construction of the pool would be included in the 1935 estimates. He requested authority for commencement of this work in December or January next in order that the pool would be available for use at the commencement of the 1935 summer season.

After brief discussion, the Committee recommended the Council to adopt this proposal.

It is understood that the baths will be similar to those at Hongkew and will be provided with efficient filtration systems which will ensure a supply of pure water.

SENSATIONAL GOLF

K. LAFFOON WINS BY RECORD MARGIN

Buffalo, July 25. The biggest margin of victory in the tournament of the New York Golfers Association has been achieved by K. Laffoon. Playing against Horton Smith in the first round, he won by 12 up and 10 to play.

Horton Smith was the winner this year of the Masters' Tournament at Atlanta, beating by ten strokes the score of Bobby Jones, who returned to competitive golf in this event.

A surprising defeat was sustained by Gene Sarazen. He was eliminated in the second round by Al Watrous, who won by four and three.

Football Coming: Entries For Next Year

SOME NEW TEAMS TO APPEAR

The list of entries for the Football League next winter gives twelve teams in the Senior Division of the League, ten in the Second Division and eleven in the Third Division.

South China has entered two teams in the Senior Division, and one each in the other two Divisions. A new entrant this year is the Railway Recreation Club, which has entered a team in the Third Division. The Eastern Athletic Association has also entered a team in the Second Division. Last year they did not compete, although they paid their affiliation fee. They completed the previous two years.

The following are the entries:
First Division.—Royal Artillery, South China (two teams), East Lancashire Regiment, St. Joseph's, Kowloon Football Club, Club de Recoelo, Hongkong Football Club, Royal Navy, Lincoln, Police and Chinese Athletic. Second Division.—Royal Artillery, South China, East Lancashire, Football Club, Royal Engineers, Eastern Athletic Association, Hongkong Football Club, Royal Navy, Lincoln, and Chinese Athletic. Third Division.—South China, East Lancashire, Radio Sports Club, Royal Army Service Corps, Royal Engineers, Royal Army Ordnance Corps, Railway Recreation Club, Royal Air Force, Club de Recoelo, University F. C. and Lincoln.

UNANIMOUS RECOMMENDATION BY S.A.F.A. COUNCIL

At a recent meeting of the Council of the Singapore Amateur Football Association, consideration was given to a letter signed by 15 of the Malay footballers who were concerned in the charges of professionalism, which were the subject of inquiry in March last, asking for early consideration of an application for reinstatement as amateurs.

The letter was very sympathetically received and on the motion of Mr. E. E. Colman (M.F.A.), seconded by Dr. J. S. Webster, it was agreed to recommend to the Football Association of Malaya that permission be granted to play at the date of their reinstatement. This decision was taken to avoid any possible hardship on teams which might be in the running for honours but still have to meet the Malays. Those clubs who have already concluded their fixtures with the Malays, playing against the weakened side, would, but for this condition, be placed at a pronounced advantage over clubs which might be called upon to meet the Malay team at full strength.

A further proposal was put forward and is under consideration that to record appreciation of the correct and sportsman-like attitude of these players, efforts should be made to arrange a special game to mark their return to local amateur football, the sides to be one made up of the players who are to be reinstated and the other selected from the remainder of Singapore.

The recommendation for reinstatement will be considered by the Football Association of Malaya at Kuala Lumpur on Saturday, Aug. 4.

The 15 players are: Salleh bin Yusoff, Mahmood bin Jalli, Mat Noor bin Kassim, Sarip bin Ali, Kassim bin Jalli, Dollah bin Ahmad, Yusof bin Ahmad, Abdul Aziz bin Haji Jaffar, Said bin Sidik, Said bin Yusof, Zakari bin Haji Ibrahim, Noordin bin Ali, Omar bin Tahir, Amin bin Kechil and Ismail bin Rasol.

THE HORSE THAT WAS A "CERT"

Lamed While Leading Half Mile From Post

The most surprising upset of the racing season occurred in the Champany Plate at Gwatkick last month.

There were three runners—The Sage, who had won all his three races in effortless style, and two moderate platers, Chelsea Reach and Tarquinus. On form, The Sage was a certainty. He started at 100—9 on.

Half a mile from the finish The Sage was leading along in front with the other two being hard-riden to get on terms with him.

Then there was a gasp from the crowd, and I picked up my glasses to see The Sage last, hobbling on three legs.

He had broken a fetlock in his hind leg, and was so badly injured that his jockey, R. Dick, immediately dismounted. The horse had to be brought back in a float.

Walter Nightingall, who trains The Sage, had the horse brought back to his Epsom quarters in the hope of saving him, but his injuries proved to be too serious and the horse was later destroyed.

Containing seating accommodation for 40,000, the main stadium will include a 500 metres track, two 200 metres tracks, a football field, three tennis courts and three basketball courts, while sleeping accommodation for 3,000 athletes will also be provided.

World Tennis Stars For Australia

The world's tennis champions will be seen in action in Melbourne during the Centenary Australian Championships from January 3 to 12, 1935.

The national tennis associations of Great Britain, United States of America, Japan, South Africa and New Zealand have already accepted the invitation of the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia to send their two best available players, while France has also received a similar invitation.

Germany, Spain, Italy and Czechoslovakia have been invited to send one representative each, and it is confidently anticipated that they will accept.

Besides the Australian Championships in Melbourne, the visiting players will be seen in action in exhibition matches in the other capital cities and in the New South Wales championships.

The cost of the work has been appropriated from the three and a half million dollar loan floated recently by the Greater Shanghai Municipal Council.

INVADING ANTIPODES

McLean Joins Britain's Golf Team

London, Aug. 1. The Scottish and Irish amateur golf champion, McLean, has cancelled his proposed trip to America, where he intended to compete in the U.S. championship.

He has accepted an invitation to travel as one of the British team, which will shortly tour Australia. The tour is being organised by the Royal and Ancient Club.—Reuter Special.

ALL EUROPE FEVERISHLY PREPARES FOR WAR

CORRESPONDENCE

British Films.

To the Editor,
Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—A couple of days ago, Cinemas, Ltd., wrote that they had acquired a limited number of British films, but that if they were appreciated they would obtain more.

Cinematographically, the new venture has started at the worst season of the year and the first offering is, I think, of 1931 vintage, although I may be mistaken. However, there is no doubt that "For Love of You" is a film to be recommended; in fact, I think it is the best musical comedy since "Toll Me 'Tis Night." There are some exquisite scenes obviously shot in Venice itself, excellent singing, including excerpts from several operas (not too long either), and very adequate wit. Altogether a very wholesome antidote to some other films which have recently been shown. A show to which children can be taken and which adults will really enjoy.

There is, however, one legacy from the old regime which I would suggest that the new lessees of the Queen's should destroy, for it will prove no asset but a distinct liability. I refer, of course, to the alleged representation of His Majesty displayed at the close of each programme, together with the accompanying National Anthem. This, I know, is an old custom, often ventilated in the columns of the Press, but it will bear repetition. His Majesty is nearly 70 years old, while the portrait is of a young man in his twenties clad in a Hussar-like uniform which I am certain His Majesty has never adorned; it is much more like the late Emperor of all the Russias than George V. It is crudely drawn, badly painted, and very scratched. The accompanying music is so worn that the first few bars are inaudible, while the rest have added a running commentary of scratching reminiscent of two cats fighting in a back alley.

It would be better if no portrait were shown on the screen and no anthem played, rather than the present travesty of loyalty which can only be considered an insult to the Crown.

ALIENS AND LAND LEASES

WARNING ISSUED IN CANTON

(Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, Aug. 1.—The Kwangtung Provincial Government issued an important official notification to-day to the Commissioners of the various departments here and to the authorities of the various districts instructing them that foreigners are not allowed to lease lands in the interior.

It is pointed out that, with the exception of missionaries, foreign nationals are not permitted to lease or purchase lands in places other than open treaty ports. Although this law has been in force for several decades, it has not been strictly observed, due to negligence on the part of the district authorities.

According to the official notification, foreigners often buy or lease lands in the interior districts under the name of a Chinese, which practice is a direct violation of the law.

The notification concludes by emphasizing that, however, should foreign nationals be found to have bought or leased lands in the interior, the leases will be cancelled.

STRANGE REPORT OF VINES' VISIT TO HONGKONG

NOTHING KNOWN LOCALLY ABOUT TOUR ARRANGEMENTS

Nanking, Aug. 2.—According to officials of the Nanking Amateur Athletic Club, Ellsworth Vines, the well-known American professional lawn tennis player, is to give a series of exhibition matches in China and Hongkong next month.

Following the receipt of information that Vines is visiting Japan and may come to China if sufficient funds can be raised, the Nanking A. A. Club quickly made arrangements with tennis clubs in Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton. As a result, it is learned that Vines agreed to play exhibition matches in Shanghai, Nanking, Hongkong and Canton in September. Nanking's share of the payment for two days' matches comes to $4,000.—Reuter.

Nothing has been locally heard about the proposal of Vines to visit Hongkong. The H.K.L.T.A. know nothing about it and it is pointed out that if Vines tours alone, any amateur who played in an exhibition with Vines would lose his status.

The Chinese Recreation Club declared that they have not been in communication with anyone in reference to a proposed Vines' visit.

HOUSE-CLEANING

AUSTRIA HUNTS OUT POTENTIAL REBELS

Vienna, Aug. 1.

The situation here is now dominated by the work of purging the public services of undesirable elements and with mending the frayed relations with Germany.

A drastic purging has commenced with the reorganization of the nation's police force, wholesale dismissals of public servants and school masters.

In Styria and Carinthia, where the heaviest fighting occurred following the Nazi putsch, there have been many arrests. The Government is determined to mercilessly pursue and uproot its influential opponents.

Dr. Rintelen is rapidly recovering from his self-inflicted wound. The Austrian Minister to Rome, allegedly deeply implicated in the Nazi plot, is telling all he knows of the affair. The authorities hope, through him, to implicate the German Government.

Feeling against Germany is very strong. Attacks on the Reich for instigating the Nazi putsch have been redoubled. A manifesto has been posted on pillars and walls throughout the city declaring: "We impeach the real murderers of Dr. Dollfuss, sitting in security beyond the frontier."—Reuter.

Von Papen Accepted Conditionally

Vienna, Aug. 1.

A clear indication that the Austrian Government will insist on definite conditions before accepting Capt. von Papen as Minister to Vienna, is contained in an article published in the Government Organ, Reichpost.

This well-informed journal says that von Papen's arrival must coincide with the cessation of Nazi propaganda against Austria and official recognition of the Austrian Legion in Germany must be withdrawn.—Reuter.

BROWN SHIRT ARMY.

Storm Troopers Going Back To Duty.

Berlin, Aug. 1.

Hitler's Brown Shirt Army returns to duty to-morrow. The new Chief-of-Staff of the unit, Herr Lutze, announcing the end of the Brown Shirts' holiday, asserts that the Storm Troopers will reappear in public and devote themselves to their tasks with all their previous determination but in a different spirit from that prevailing when they were commanded by traitors. These former leaders have been executed following the exposure of the plot against Hitler.

The Storm Troops, adds Lutze, must become again a powerful and unbreakable instrument in the hands of The Leader.—Reuter Special.

CLOUDS ON THE HORIZON

Observers of the European political situation see ominous war clouds looming on the horizon, according to the Washington correspondent of Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz.

The conviction is expressed that the situation on the Continent, which has been growing steadily worse in the last few days, is likely to deteriorate over the winter.

There is no telling where the storm is likely to break, but Washington officials point out that the Austrian situation is filled with "imponderables" any one of which may supply the pretext for a war implicating the whole of Europe.

FEVERISH PREPARATIONS.

Every country in Europe, says the Swan, Culbertson correspondent, is now engaged in feverish war preparations.

The new British armament policy, taken in conjunction with the Commons speeches by Mr. Stanley Baldwin and Sir John Simon, are believed to indicate a conviction in London that hopes of maintaining peace in Europe much longer are not good.

CURRENCY FEARS.

Meanwhile, there is imminent danger of a break in the gold bloc, which would almost certainly be followed by the obligatory devaluation of all European gold currencies.

Observers are convinced that if any one of the gold countries abandons the gold bases, the rest would immediately follow suit. It is also suggested as a distinct possibility that foreign gold holdings in London, estimated at £200,000,000 might be taken over, possibly at the old gold parity. Sterling exchange is expected to weaken.

FRENCH CONSUL LEAVING

APPOINTED TO MILAN CONSULATE

The numerous friends of Mons. M. G. Dausse de la Prade, Consul-General for France in Hongkong, will regret to hear that he is to leave the Colony on being appointed to the Consulate-General in Milan.

A telegram conveying news of the new appointment was received by the Hongkong Consulate from the Legation in Peking this morning. The date of Mons. de la Prade's departure is not yet known.

During his residence in the Colony, Mons. de la Prade has a host of friends amongst all sections of the community. He has been most popular, both as Consul and in the social life of the Colony. His impending departure will be widely regretted.

When a girl throws a "ball" nowadays, few men want to steal home.

GREAT PIONEER

An apt and able survey of the highlights of Robert Morrison's pioneering enterprises was broadcast last night by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen from ZBW.

Dr. Allen said: In the talk I gave yesterday at the Rotary Club, I tried to present Morrison as translator and as servant of the East India Company in the difficult days which preceded the cession of Hongkong. He was emphatically a pioneer; and we can fix certain points in his life from which lines a century long can be drawn to our own day; it is for us to continue them into the future. If what I said yesterday might have gone under the title Morrison the Pioneer, I would choose as my subject to-night "Morrison; A Century After." Let us imagine Morrison come back, not to Canton and Macao this time, but to Hongkong.

If He Could See.

I have no doubt in what direction he would first look for the justification of his work. He would be proud of the work which the London Missionary Society, which sent him out, has continued both here and on the mainland and he would rejoice to see beyond that, the growth of a vigorous Chinese Christian Church, capable not merely of self-support but also of shouldering a large measure of responsibility for the evangelisation of the New Territories. When he died, China was still a closed land, missionary work was under the ban of the Imperial authorities, and his own and his colleagues' converts were but ten in number. The century which has elapsed since then has seen the rise in China of a vigorous Christian community, tried in the fires of persecution, and able to offer to the nation leadership in every department of its life.

We have not only Morrison's work among us; it is of interest to note that we have still some of the tools with which he did it. For instance, his English Bible, his Chinese Dictionary, and the copy of a Chinese manuscript in the British Museum which Morrison had made for him while still in London.

Though Morrison himself died before he came to play no small part in its early history. He had advised his son Robert not to be a missionary but rather to be a merchant, not that he was himself dissatisfied with the missionary's calling, but he thought that, if I understand that he eventually occupied a seat on the Legislative Council.

On the shelves of the old City Hall Library you will come across files of the "Hongkong Register" for 1845 to 1852. That was originally the "Canton Register," which Morrison secured as sub-editor, and in the columns of which he championed the cause of freedom of speech. It is characteristic of the man that his agreement gave him $300 a year, not for himself, but for any charitable object he liked to name.

First School.

I will now pass on to trace briefly the connection between Morrison's work and education in the Colony. His mind turned early in this direction, but it was clear that neither here nor Macao could give him the site for a school. He asked a place where security was available, and he looked therefore to Malacca. Here, in 1818, he founded his Anglo-Chinese College, with his colleague Milne as the Principal. Out of the salary he received from East India Company, he gave $1,000 down, promising to supplement it by an annual grant of £100 for 5 years. The object of the institution was stated to be the cultivation of English and Chinese literature in order to the spread of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

After the cession of Hongkong, there was no longer any need to remain at such a distance from China, and Dr. James Legge therefore moved the College here. But education in those days had to sail in stormier waters than those it is called upon to navigate at present, and Dr. Legge in 1850 came to the conclusion that the College was not fulfilling its purpose and should be closed.

Chinese Culture.

The name and spirit of the old Anglo-Chinese College have since been revived in the present Ying Wah College, but they cannot be said to continue it without a break. But that section of Morrison's original plan which contemplated the study by foreigners of Chinese culture has still to be realised. One can only hope that the opening of the Fung Yin Shan Library and the acquisition of the Chinese section of the Han-choi Club Library will serve as milestones along the road to just such a goal—our own University functioning as a centre for study and research in things Chinese.

It is significant of the importance attached by Morrison to education that when, six months only after his death, the foreign community in Canton resolved to secure some sort of permanent memorial, the decision was taken to found a school. This was opened in Macao under an American teacher, no one being forthcoming from England. It was transferred in due course to Hongkong, where a site was given for it on Morrison Hill. But it lived there only a few years, as the support needed was not forthcoming. The Society lingered on for a number of years as trustees for certain funds, and came to an unfortunate end when these were lost by the failure of one of the leading firms in the Colony. However, the Society was reconstituted later on, and dividends came in from the estate, and it found itself in possession of a sum sufficient to enable it to offer scholarships in the Central School of the time.

Singapore's Debt.

I do not propose to go into the further history of these scholarships. Suffice it is to say that they preserve the name of Dr. Morrison to this day in Queen's College, and that they are now five in number, a sum being paid annually in connection therewith which amounts to more than one-half of the capital originally invested.

Raffles College in Singapore owes its foundation to a conversation between Sir Stamford Raffles and Morrison and with his usual generosity in every good cause, Morrison gave to it at the outset the sum of $5,000. I have not access to any history of the School of Oriental Languages which forms to-day one of the schools of London University, but Broomhall in his "Life" tells us that Morrison secured the foundation of such an institution during his one absence from China on leave.

Sailors' Champion.

There is one further interest of his which must not be overlooked. He felt a responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the sailors who came in such large numbers with the Company's fleet at the opening of the trading season each year. He himself conducted services on board the ships off Canton, and it was his recommendation to London and New York which moved the responsible authorities there to take the problem seriously, appointing special chaplains and commencing that work for seafaring men which is to be found now throughout the Far East.

He realised before leaving England that some equipment for medical relief might be advisable, and took a medical course at Bart's. We find him in 1820 opening a dispensary in Macao in conjunction with one of the Company's doctors. The next step was taken when another doctor in the employ of the Company joined to his regular work the charge of a free hospital which he opened by renting two houses, and which was patronised in 4 years by more than 4,000 patients. There could be no doubt of the need and of the welcome extended to any effort to relieve it. But the hospital was short-lived, and the explanation which Wells Williams, the historian of these early years, gives of its demise, is worth quoting. He says: "It was unavoidably closed in 1832, there being no physician so circumstanced that he could gratuitously attend to such a crowd of patients, few or none of whom could pay him in anything better than thanks, fruit, or fire-crackers, or written cards of gratitude."

The Rev. E. G. Powell on behalf of the Robert Morrison Centenary Committee; Professor L. Forster on behalf of the Tyneside Community in Hongkong; the Rev. Paul S. F. T'so and Yinson Hui, on behalf of the Chinese Y.M.C.A. Hongkong. A wreath was also laid by Mr. F. J. Gellion.

The graves of John Morrison, the son, Mary Morrison, the wife, and of Dr. Morrison himself were then blessed by the Bishop, after which the party returned to the Chuen Chow and arrived in Hongkong just after 7 o'clock.

The problem of hospital finances was thus early in evidence!

A Set Purpose.

Perhaps I have given the impression that Morrison was a man of multifarious activities. That would be only one part of the truth. He was also a man of utter singleness of purpose. He may have done a score of things, but he did them all with one objective in view. He was resolved to make the Bible accessible to the people of China in their own language, against the day he saw coming when they would be free to receive it, and to bring a knowledge of Chinese within the reach of those who would then be able to do what had been denied to him.

But his work was indeed a many-sided one, in spite of the restrictions with which it was hampered at every point. And it is just that which makes the selection of a permanent memorial no easy task. As it is, however, the needs of the hospitals in which the London Missionary Society's doctors work are urgent enough to have first claim. Probably Robert Morrison never set foot on Hongkong; he knew it at most as an island of no significance which he passed sometimes on his travels. But we have reason to remember him, for he is one of the makers of the community in which we live, and if in the days to come it is asked in Hongkong: "Who then was Robert Morrison?" let us have something to which we can point at once, to preserve the memory of his achievement and as our own tribute to his worth.

A man, Lui Fai, was knocked down by motor car No. 2373 on the Kennedy Town Praya last night and was removed to the Government Civil Hospital.

Chung Hing, living in room No. 201, New Asia Hotel, succumbed to opium poisoning, stated to have been self-administered. He died in the Kowloon Hospital, in the early hours of this morning.

H.M.S. Tamar, the depot ship of the China Squadron, left dock this morning after re-fit, and returned to her berth in the basin. She went into dock a fortnight ago and during that time the 9 p.m. gun salute was dispensed with. The practice will be resumed as from to-day.

At 3 p.m. the party met at the little church in the Cemetery where a short and impressive service was held, conducted by Bishop Hall. Prayers were said by the Bishop, the Rev. E. G. Powell, the Rev. C. D. Cousins and Mr. Wat Lok-hing, and the Lesson, taken from the Third Book of Wisdom, by Mr. Herbert Phillips, after which the party proceeded to the grave for the wreath-laying and blessing by the Bishop.

Mr. Herbert Phillips laid a floral tribute on behalf of the British Community in South China; Dr. Gibson and Mr. S. Y. Boxer on behalf of the Directors and Missionaries of the London Missionary Society.—Continued on previous column.

THE RAILWAY

The draft of the working agreement of the Canton-Kowloon Railway through service is reported to have been signed by delegates of the British and Chinese sections. Beyond the fact 72% of the receipts is to go to the Chinese side and 28% to the British, nothing else has been revealed, says the Canton Gazette. As is well known the British section operates 21 miles of the entire line, and the Chinese, 89 miles. If computing on the mileage basis, the distribution of takings should be 80% and 20% respectively. This was what the Chinese delegates at first set out to secure.

The British have all along maintained that receipts distribution should not be based on the number of miles of line operated by each side, as, due to the hilly and rocky nature of the land on their side, it has cost more to build their length of rail than the average 21 miles in the Chinese section. Whatever may have been the considerations the fact lies in the acceptance by both sections of the 72:28 ratio. While this is 7% below the figures sought by the Chinese, still an agreement has been amicably reached. It is understood that a working basis has also been arrived at. It is to be hoped that a progressive policy has been worked out and with a clear and friendly understanding reached, that the greatest energy and the fullest co-operation will be shown by the two managements.

Safety Factor.

With the Canton-Kowloon Railway as well as with any other

passenger transport service, the main factor for attracting patronage is safety. There is no question of the presence of this on the British section, as trains run there nightly without molestation by lawless elements. If a night through service is desired it may be at any time introduced on their side with confidence. We would like to see the same condition obtaining in the Chinese section. The next factor is speed. Both sides must maintain their line in such a condition so that an increase in speed may any day be effected without danger and discomfort to passengers which would arise with an ill-maintained road.

Last of all comes the factor of convenience. The need of a noon through service has long been keenly felt, especially for week ends. It is gratifying to learn that a daily midday express will be operated from October. The time of departure of the morning and afternoon expresses may with advantage be altered to earlier and later respectively.

There are other minor details towards popularizing the line and it is details, as we know, that give the finishing touch to everything. The compartments could be cleaner, the attendants more courteous to passengers and attentive to duty, and the guards more alert. An alarm system is necessary in case of lawlessness, accident, serious illness, etc. Someone in each train should have first aid training and a medicine chest should be kept. An inspector who would see to the safety and comfort of passengers could well be kept. Notices should be posted inviting complaints and at the same time suggestions for the elimination of those things which form the subject of the complaints.

Increased Revenue.

With the elements of safety, speed, comfort and convenience present and efforts made to please patrons there is good reason to expect an increase in receipts resulting in the making up for the 7% decrease on the British side with the new agreement and the 7% shortage from the original aim on the Chinese section. An often stated in these columns before, although the Canton-Kowloon Railway is Government operated and in times of military emergency is calculated to be of great strategic value, primarily it is intended as a business venture, hence dependent on the goodwill of the public for its prosperity. It will never do for the two managements to disregard their well being and wishes. It should be run just as any other business enterprise; and all the principles that go towards the making of a successful business, needless to say, should be just as carefully observed. Once we knew a cinema proprietor who would choose films not to please his public but himself and generally humoured himself in the conducting of his business. It was not long before he had to sell out. He attributed his failure to bad luck, whereas really it was bad management or unsound policy. His successor reversed his policy and to-day that theatre is one of the most profitable concerns of his city.

ARSON & SABOTAGE

Moscow, Aug. 1.

Five Russian engineers were sentenced to be shot and six others to terms of imprisonment, following their trial on charges of arson and sabotage.

It was alleged that the accused set fire to a large factory in the Ural district, housing extensive machine-making plant.

The motive behind the crime, it was alleged at the trial, was to secure orders for a foreign firm. A foreign expert employed at the factory was stated to have issued the instructions.—Reuter.

HEAVY RAINS CONTINUE

NEARLY SEVEN INCHES SINCE MONDAY

Heavy rains were experienced in the Colony during last night and the early hours of this morning, but the total recorded at the Royal Observatory for the 24 hours ended at 10.30 a.m. to-day was only 1.70 inches, due to the fact that the rain was spasmodic.

Since Monday, a total of 6.83 inches has been recorded at the Observatory.

There have been heavy falls in the West River district, with the result that the river at Shihing rose nearly nine feet yesterday, from 17.5 feet to 26 feet.

MANOEUVRES AT SHANHAIKWAN

Tientsin, Aug. 2.
In spite of the objection by the Japanese to foreign troops holding military manoeuvres in the Shanhaikwan area the British forces commenced exercises yesterday at Erhlong-miao, and will continue until August 4.

The British authorities have no intention of giving up treaty rights along the Peiping Railway.

KOWLOON DOG CASES

TWO SUMMONSES DISMISSED

BITING INCIDENT

Holding that the evidence of the prosecution was not complete, Mr. Lee this morning dismissed a summons against J. A. Tarrant, of No. 1 Chatham Road, for allowing his dog in the street without a muzzle.

Defendant denied the charge. Indian constable No. B501 stated that at 10.15 a.m. on July 13 he saw defendant's dog in Minden Avenue without a muzzle. It had been "roaming about for half an hour." He then followed it and saw it entering No. 1 Chatham Road.

Defendant, however, produced two witnesses, Mr. Alfred Jackson and Mrs. Tarrant, both of whom testified that the dog was never out in the street that morning but was in the dining room all the time.

ALSO DISMISSED.

The summons against G. A. Noronha, of No. 17 Ashley Road, for allowing his dog in the street without a muzzle was also dismissed.

It was stated at a previous hearing that the dog had a muzzle, but, despite that, it had been able to bite the daughter of Mrs. Remedios Sarreal, of No. 39 Ashley Road.

Mr. Lee had ruled in the last hearing that a dog which was able to bite through its muzzle must be deemed to be unmuzzled.

Evidence was given this morning by Mrs. Sarreal, who stated that at 4 p.m. on July 5 she heard her daughter crying just outside the house. She rushed out and found her daughter bleeding from the leg and arms. A dog was standing nearby with his collar and muzzle loose.

After learning that her daughter had been bitten by this dog, she followed it and found it to be the property of the defendant.

NO DIRECT EVIDENCE.

Defendant said he did not know whether his dog had bitten the

CUSTOMS CRUISER THEFT

WATCHES AND MONEY STOLEN

The theft of two gold watches, two metal wrist watches and $32 in money, to the total value of $164 from the Chinese Customs cruiser, Fei Sing, at the Kowloon Docks on July 17 formed the subject of a charge against Lam Yan, unemployed, before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Inspector Hourihan said defendant was recommended by the complainant, Ha Chi-li, a boarding house keeper, as a boy on the cruiser. The cruiser had gone away, and would not be back for three months. The watches were recovered in a pawnshop.

Mr. Hamilton imposed three months' hard labour, remarking that it was a breach of trust.

MORE DOG-BITES

EUROPEAN LAD IN LATEST LIST

Two further cases of dog-bite have been reported to the police, in one of which the young son of Mr. Shuster, of 58 Canton Road, Kowloon, was bitten by a dog belonging to his father. The lad has received medical treatment, and the animal has been sent to the Mataukok depot.

In the other case, Au Young, of 82 Lockhart Road, has been sent to the Government Civil Hospital after having been bitten by a dog belonging to Lai Shu-king, of the same address. The dog has been sent to the Kennedy Town depot.

complainant's daughter or not. He definitely knew that the dog was muzzled.

As nobody actually saw the biting, his Worship dismissed the summons.

C. E. Terry, of No. 11 Belfron Road, was fined $5 for not having a licence for his dog on July 11. Defendant admitted the offence but stated that it was a Spaniel puppy only just over three months old.
